VOL. VI.—NO. 1746 NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, APRIL 24, 1857. PRICE TWO CENTS.

DINNER OF THE ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY.

Speech of Lord Napier, the British Minister at Washington.

The 71st anniversary celebration of the St. George's Society took place last evening, at Delmonico's, Broadway. The festival presented unusual interest from the fact that the newly-accredited British Minister, Lord Napier, came on invitation from Washington to lend to it the influence of his presence. Its rooms, which have been expanded, on account of the great representation in point of numbers was anticipated, were crowded to excess. The dinner for, it is said, there is not a great deal more, several days ago, never could be procured under a number more than equal to the number of guests who crowded the large dining-hall of the society, and even then crowded to excess.

At the upper table was seated the President, Mr. Henry Evers, supported on the right by the guest of the evening, Lord Napier. On the same side of the presiding officer we observed Mr. Adam Norrie, President of the St. Andrew's Society; Mr. Dieterich Gerner, of the St. Nicholas; Dr. Beale, Mr. Hydeman, Mr. Young, Mr. Fullerton, (of the London Times,) and Mr. Barse, the Treasurer of the St. George's Society.

To the left were Mr. Bell, of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick; Mr. Gabrieux, of the German Benevolent Society; Judge Davies, of the St. David's; Rev. Mr. Cooper; Mr. Joseph Fourtin, acting British Consul at this port; Major-General Sanford, and several others.

The room was decorated with the flags of Great Britain, America, France, Scotland and Ireland, which were draped around the walls. Behind the President stood the beautiful painting of Queen Victoria, which on several former occasions has been similarly appropriated. Pendent from the top of the frame was a massive gilt crown, supported by ribbons, which were fastened to the sceptre and sword of state that formed part of the ornaments of the entablature. The music was supplied by an admirable Band, and a Glee Club from the Harmonic Society, consisting of Messrs. Gilmore, Bannister, P. H. Nash, R. M. Brown, Washington M. Smith and G. W. Wooster.

At the close of the repast, Non Nobis Domine was sung by the Glee Club.

Mr. Evers (who acted as President in place of Mr. Cheney, the Incumbent, who was inevitably absent,) then rose and said:

Brothers of St. George: You are, most of you, aware how unexpected to myself is my presence in the chair this evening. And in the absence of your worthy President I must own, though I am very sensible of the honor you have done me, that I could have wished that my lot had fallen into better and more experienced hands. And yet, if you will kindly assist me and bear with my short-comings, I, on my part, will endeavor to do justice to your distinguished honor, and to promote the hilarity of the evening. Gentlemen, since we last had the pleasure of meeting together on this festive day nothing strikingly prominent, as I think, has occurred. Our own dear native island has been blessed by a kind Providence with a large share of commercial prosperity, agricultural plenty, domestic peace and happiness—(cheers)—blessings which I profess to say have also been graciously vouchsafed in a more or less degree to the land in which we live. (Cries of "hear, hear.") The treaty of Peace with Russia, thanks to the energy and determination of Her Majesty's Ministers—[loud cheers]—has been carried out both in the spirit and to the letter. The dispute with Persia, by a display of similar energy, has been happily ended, and I trust that the present difficulty with China will likewise soon be brought to an honorable and satisfactory termination, as well as all other minor differences that exist among the nations of the earth. [Hear.] I should also, perhaps, refer to the general election which has lately taken place. [Cheers.] And I must own, gentlemen, that I cannot but congratulate you upon its results. [Loud cheers.] For whatever, gentlemen, may be the differences of opinion in politics that exist among us, we must all, as true-hearted men, set our faces against "factious opposition." [Great cheering.] And though you may not be disposed to agree with me that Lord Palmerston is "the right man in the right place," yet I think you must admire his "pluck," and do honor to his English feelings and sentiments. [Loud cheers.]

But, gentlemen, our Society was not formed solely for the purpose of social intercourse or to cherish a love of country, but to devise means for the benefit and welfare of our fellows. And, therefore, it will not be out of place if I call your attention for a few minutes to the charity attached to our Society. [Cheers.] Many of you, perhaps, are not aware that the charitable fund of your Society is mainly dependent for its support upon the number and liberality of the brothers of St. George, assisted by the extraneous aid of an annual appeal in the shape of a concert or lecture; and that during the most fashionable period of last Winter the funds would have been exhausted but for the energy and efforts of your Committee. Should such a state of things exist, brother Englishmen and brothers of St. George? I appeal with confidence to your liberality. Will you not come to the rescue? Will you not rally round your time-honored institution and devise some means by which a little meal in the barrel and a little oil in the cruse may always be found, so that you may continue to enjoy the privilege of dispensing, through the instrumentality of this your Society, to the wants and necessities of your less fortunate fellow-countrymen.

Gentlemen, I thank you again for the honor you have done me and for the patience with which you have listened to me.

The President resumed his seat amid loud and prolonged cheering. In rising to read the first toast he said:

Gentlemen: The first regular toast that I have to propose this evening is

"The day and all who honor it—St. George and merry England. [Rapturous applause.] Music—"Hearts of Oak."

In proposing the next toast he said he had intended to speak to the first, but would now pass it. The second toast was one very dear to the heart of every true Englishman; nay, it caused a thrill to run through his very bones and marrow. He would give

The Queen. [Vehement and prolonged cheering.] Music by the band and chorus by the company, standing—"God save the Queen."

The next toast was the President of the United States,

who, he said, entered on his arduous duties under circumstances of no ordinary interest and importance, and he (Mr. Evers) trusted that when he (the President) should be called upon to retire from his high office he might have the satisfaction of feeling within himself that he had done whatever within him lay, not only to promote the best interests of his countrymen, but the best interests of mankind at large. [Loud applause.]

Music—"Hail Columbia."

4. Her Majesty's Ministers and Representatives on this Continent.—[Enthusiastic cheering.]

The President, after proposing the sentiment, said:

Gentlemen: Among our distinguished guests here this evening we have a noble personage, the representative of Her Majesty. [Cheers.] And we accordingly welcome him as such. [Cheers.] And not only as Her Majesty's Minister, but individually. [Cheers.] I am sure, gentlemen, that I only echo your sentiments when I say that I trust that he long as he resides among us our festive board will always be graced with his presence. [Loud cheers.]

My lord, (turning to Lord Napier,) you have the privilege of bearing a great name—[cheers]—a name not only consecrated in the high ranks of science and familiar to us in the glowing pages of history—[cheers]—but endeared to us by deeds of chivalry and valor, blended with acts of mercy and kindness; whilst the crowning characteristic of your race has been an unwavering sense of duty in the man supported by honesty and manly independence. [Cheers.] And here I should be thought to be using the words of empty panegyric, I would refer to the work which has just emanated from the press, the Life of Napier, written by his brother. It is the life of that true-hearted Englishman and glorious soldier, Sir Charles Napier. [Cheers.] May your residence, my lord, at Washington, not only be agreeable to Lady Napier and yourself, but may it also afford you opportunities of adding fresh laurels to your great name by cementing closer and closer together those feelings of friendship and good-will that should always exist between two nations bound together not only by the ties of mutual kindred but of common interest. [Cheers.] My lord, in behalf of your friends, my fellow-countrymen, and the brothers of St. George, and, I may add in behalf of this whole assemblage—[cheers]—I most cordially bid you welcome, and your mission God speed. [Great cheering.]

The Chairman concluded by introducing, amid a perfect tempest of applause, the British Minister, Lord Napier.

When silence had been restored the Right Honorable gentleman addressed the assemblage in words which as well as they could be heard in the absurdly remote and injudicious position assigned to the representatives of the Press, were as follows:

Gentlemen: I beg to offer you my very sincere and cordial thanks for the honor which you have done me in associating my name with the toast, and with the health of "Her Majesty's Ministers." Her Majesty's Ministers will be highly gratified when they learn that their names and their offices are held in such esteem, regard and memory by their fellow-countrymen residing in the United States. I, myself, gentlemen, in my own personal capacity, am sensible that I am under deeper obligations for the acclamations which you have elicited to bestow upon my name; but I see in the manner in which you have received it, a warm revulsion of those feelings of sympathy and regard which may be suspended or obscured for a time, and by accidents between America and England, but which are never deeply founded on the affections and the interests of the two countries. [Loud cheers.]

[illegible] which I have the happiness to see, and I will ever have done me the honor to [illegible] which has been familiar to my [illegible] in a very early period of my life.

Gentlemen, I may still maintain that there is not a more glorious, and a more useful [illegible] which I share with my venerable friend, the United States Minister in London—the employment of holding aloft the ensigns of peace and friendship between the two great branches of the English race. [Loud cheers.]

Gentlemen: I feel that I have entered upon that employment here at a most auspicious period. I can assure you that I have met, upon the part of the President of the United States, upon the part of General Cass, upon the part of all the ministers and functionaries of the United States with whom I have been brought into contact, every manifestation of that cordial and friendly disposition which animates the Government and the community of Great Britain. [Cheers.]

There are no questions involving any degree of anxiety or apprehension pending between the two countries. [Cheers.] And I am sometimes disposed to hope that the time may arise, come when there will scarcely be any subjects of official correspondence at all. [Cheers.] If I may not flatter myself with this agreeable prospect of official vacuity—[laughter]—if I must look forward to my fair and natural share of discussions and debates, surely, gentlemen, we have in the experience of the past the best grounds for believing that there can never be a question so difficult or so complicated that it may not meet with a prompt, with a peaceful, and with an honorable solution. [Loud cheers.]

There are many questions at once envenomed and aleerating, which have been settled in a pacific manner in our recent negotiations. Our Eastern boundaries have been defined by one treaty. Our Western boundaries have been settled by another. The disputed Fisheries which at one time threatened to embroil us, have been converted by the salutary engagements of reciprocity, into a source of mutual wealth. Finally, gentlemen, the question of the privileges of neutral trade in time of war—that question which, for so long, was the constant cause of complaints and recriminations, has now obtained by the spontaneous declarations of Her Majesty's ministers during the late hostilities, that liberal interpretation so long desired by the United States, and which no Government of England hereafter will ever be inclined to revoke or to repeal. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen: I am justified, then, in saying that by an easy exercise of frankness, of mutual forbearance and indulgence, no question can arise between our countries which will not admit of an easy and an amicable settlement. But, gentlemen, I desire more than cordiality—I desire coöperation. [Cheers.]

Now, gentlemen, I do not wish to alarm the citizens of the United States who are here present by raising before their averted eyes the phantom of "entangling alliances." [Laughter and cheers.] Entangling alliances, gentlemen, are a kind of political spectre, which seems to have descended with undiminished terrors from the period of the Revolution to the present day. [Cheers and laughter.]

There may be mutual coöperation where there are no written engagements; and, gentlemen, where the heart is wanting, there may be written engagements without mutual coöperation. [Cheers.] All then, gentlemen, that I wish to say is, that our respective Governments should perpetually make an early and sincere declaration and avowal to each other of their views and intentions with respect to all subjects which involve the common interests of the two countries—[Cheers.]—whereby they will have the benefit of mutual good offices and mutual counsel, and whereby they will be able to avoid those one-sided resolutions and those startling announcements which are apt to disturb the confidence of commerce and calculated to excite the sensibilities and jealousies of too high-spirited nations. [Cheers.] Gentlemen, the only entangling alliance which I shall venture to recommend to your adoption is the submarine cable between this country and England. [Great laughter and cheering.]

My friend, the honorable Chairman, has been so kind as to allude in terms of glowing eulogy and encomium to the services which members of my family have been enabled, in former times and generations, to offer to the sovereign and their country either in the departments of science or in those of war. The sincerity, gentlemen, in which that encomium was pronounced, and the manner in which those observations were received, are certainly exceedingly gratifying to my own pride. And all this is certainly an additional incentive to me to endeavor to render myself not unworthy of those services which have been performed by members of my family upon previous occasions. [Cheers.]

I cannot flatter myself that I possess any peculiar fitness or any local experience which could enable me to perform the duties of Her Majesty's Minister in a distinguished manner. But, gentlemen, this I can assure you, that I undertake those duties with the highest satisfaction and with the happiest anticipations. [Cheers.] Gentlemen, it was some time ago observed in England, and it was repeated in some quarters in America, that the members of the regular diplomatic profession of Great Britain were not qualified by their previous education and experience to contend with the stubborn and masculine elements of American politics. [Cheers.]

It was supposed, gentlemen, that we were so inured in the petty arts and in the dark practices of "cabinet intrigue"—that we were so accustomed to humble ourselves in the twilight of military courts that we were not qualified nor disposed to meet a free people in the light of day. [Loud cheers.] Gentlemen: did you observe any symptoms of this intellectual decrepitude in Sir Richard Pakenham, or in Sir Henry Bulwer. I have not the honor of having ever served with those distinguished personages, but, in honor to the profession to which I belong, I am justified in alleging that in my friend and my former chief, Sir H. Seymour, I never observed any want of vigor or capacity. And, gentlemen, I never observed any want of vigor and independence in my later master, Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe, who has passed thirty years of his indefatigable life in contending against the ambition of arbitrary power in one country and in mitigating its abuses in another.

Gentlemen, I do not wish to say anything unduly and ungratefully depreciatory of any country or of any Government. I have had some experience of despotic Governments. I have lived in Naples, in Turkey and in Russia. Gentlemen, there are elements of happiness in them all. Fortunately, I say, there are elements of kindness, of culture and of happiness which no political system whatever can exclude from the face of nature and from the hearts of men. [Loud cheers.] But, gentlemen, neither the retrospective glories of the Italian scene, nor the ancient repose and the picturesque associations of oriental life, nor the splendid enchantments of social life which have arisen in their most agreeable form upon the margin of the Neva, can ever make an Englishman undervalue or forget those principles of freedom which have been cherished by our common fathers at home, and which by them were sown broadcast upon the soil of this great American continent. [Cheers.]

Gentlemen, I have since my arrival sometimes observed an impression in the United States that the development of this country is regarded with jealousy by England. Gentlemen, this is an erroneous opinion. [Cheers.] You will hear me out in the assertion that the last vestiges of former prejudices founded on the animosities of two unhappy wars are being very rapidly extinguished. The peaceful and legitimate expansion of the United States forms a matter of satisfaction and pride of every reasonable Englishman. That expansion forms the best resort and relief for our superabundant population; it forms the best market for our increasing industry; it is the triumph of our labor and our arts, of our language, our religion and our blood. [Loud cheering.] No thoughtful Englishman can contemplate this unparalled spectacle of future predominance without emotions of thankfulness and praise.

No thoughtful foreigner can regard it without a sigh, because Providence has not reserved the future empire of the world for his own tongue and his own race. [Cheers.] Gentlemen: these sentiments of sympathy and good-will to which I give a feeble utterance, are, believe me, not rare or partial in our country, nor do I derive them from obscure authority. [Hear, hear.]

Gentlemen, I have gathered these sentiments in the benevolent pages of a Carlisle, in the wise conclusions of an Aberdeen, and in the eloquent declarations of an Elgin. Gentlemen, I have heard these sentiments declared and enforced from the bench of the Government, and I have heard them echoed back from the benches of the opposition. Gentlemen, these sentiments have been inculcated upon me with sincere and careful emphasis by the Earl of Clarendon, and by that noble Viscount who is first in the domicile and in the hearts of the British people. [Hurricane Applause.]

Finally, gentlemen, I have received these sentiments as a fruitful trust from the hands of my sovereign, and I will not lay up this profitable talent in a diplomatic napkin.

(Vehement and continued cheering amid which the noble Lord sat down.)

The next toast in order was "Our Sister Societies."

Mr. Adam Norrie responded for the St. Andrew's Society, and proposed as a sentiment, "The Crosses St. George and St. Andrew. May they ever mark the faith, but never the love, of our children."

For the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, Mr. Richard Bell responded, in a vein of peculiar humor. He gave as a toast, "The four-leaved British Shamrock, England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, ingrafted upon one stem." Drank with loud cheers.

Hon. Judge Davies, of the Supreme Court, responded for the St. David's Society. His sentiment was, "A cordial welcome and complete success to the mission of the distinguished Minister of the British Government."

Lord Napier briefly returned thanks, when

Mr. Gabrieux responded for the German Society. He praised England highly for her business facilities. He had occasion to apply to the British Government for assistance in some business affairs, and he volunteered as a sentiment, "The noble qualities of the Englishman, always regulated by his business-like habits."

Mr. De Peyster Ogden was the next speaker. He replied for the St. Nicholas Society, in a graphic and lively manner.

Mr. Wm. M. Evarts responded eloquently for the New-England Society. A tribute which he paid to Lord Napier was, however, somewhat equivocal. He said that, "We Yankees being a very calculating people, told it as a special compliment that the British sovereign has sent us a representative whose name and fame are inseparably connected with the noble science of logarithms." He would trust that there was no danger of ever confounding logarithms with loggerheads. For a sentiment, he gave "England,—Old England or New-England,—always England, in its love of liberty and its allegiance to law." Drank with enthusiasm.

The sixth regular toast was "The Army and Navy of Great Britain and the United States. May they never meet but as friends."

Col. Dawkins, of the Coldstream Guards responded for the English Army. Major General Sanford replied for the United States Army.

The last toast was "Woman," to which the band responded in some appropriate music.

ARRIVAL OF THE AMERICA AT HALIFAX

Sackville, Thursday, April 23—Midnight.

The severe snow-storm with which we have been visited prostrated the telegraphic wires between Truro and Halifax, and communication with the latter place has been entirely suspended. This evening, however, we received the bare announcement that the steamship America has just arrived at Halifax, but, although, several hours have been spent in endeavoring to get over a few words of her news, we have not been able to accomplish it. There is now no current whatever on the lines, and as a raw storm prevails the prospect of getting anything to-night is entirely hopeless.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Cases before the Third Naval Court of Inquiry—Organization of the Wagon-Road Corps—Great Crowd of Office-Seekers.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times

Washington, Thursday, April 23.

The Third Naval Court of Inquiry will take up the cases of the Senior Officers. Capt. Latimer is first in order, but he is not ready. Capt. Rapes is the next, but he is in North Carolina. These officers were furloughed. The next is Capt. William Ramsey.

Secretary Cobb left for Georgia this morning, to be absent a fortnight.

Robert J. Walker's family left the city to-day to join him in New-York.

This being the President's birthday, he received many congratulations upon his fine health. X. Y. Z.

[FROM OUR REGULAR TELEGRAPHIC REPORTER.]

Washington, Thursday, April 23.

The Department of the Interior this morning completed the organization of the Wagon Road Corps as follows:

Fort Ridgely and South Pass Road—W. H. Nobles, of Minnesota, Superintendent; Philo P. Hubble, of Minnesota, Disbursing Agent, and Samuel A. Medary, of Ohio, Engineer.

Fort Kearney, South Pass and Honey Lake Division—W. M. T. Magraw, of Missouri, Superintendent; Asaf Beale, of Maryland, Disbursing Agent, and F. W. Lander, Mass., Engineer.

Western Division—John Kirk, of California, Superintendent; Frank Denver, of California, Disbursing Agent, and Mr. Bishop, of California, Engineer.

El Paso and Fort Yuma—James B. Leech, of Texas, Superintendent; Gabriel Jordan, of Alabama, Disbursing Agent, and N. H. Hutton, Engineer.

Messrs. Magraw, Nobles and Leech leave Washington to-day. Mr. Kirk is en route for California.

The operations will be commenced with the least practicable delay. The War Department has not yet completed its organization for the road assigned to it.

The number of office-seekers has largely increased during the present week. They press their applications both at the Departments and private lodgings of the Secretaries, while the President is equally fatigued with their importunities.

Mr. Henry J. Hulbert has been appointed Collector of Memphis, Tenn.

No Southern mail has been received from beyond Montgomery.

The Disputed Mayoralty of Albany.

Albany, Thursday, April 23.

The question of the disputed Mayoralty between Eli Perry, American, and Dr. Quackenbush, Democrat, was set down for trial to-day. Mr. Perry attended, but Dr. Quackenbush did not appear in Court, and an application was made for judgment in Mr. Perry's favor, but it was refused, on the ground that though the parties were bound in honor by private contract to come to trial to-day, no official stipulation was before the Court. Mayor Perry expressed a determination to take his seat as President of the Common Council at its next meeting. As the Council is largely Democratic, some trouble is anticipated.

From Boston.

HON. CALEB CUSHING'S WELCOME HOME—DEMISE OF THE BOSTON TIMES.

Boston, Thursday, April 23.

Hon. Caleb Cushing's return to his home in Newburyport to-day was quite an event in that flourishing town. A Special Committee of the citizens escorted him from Boston, and on his arrival at Newburyport a welcome address was made by Mayor Davenport, to which Mr. Cushing responded in a lengthy and eloquent speech. There was a national salute fired, a military and civic procession and a grand levee at the City Hall in the evening.

The Boston Daily Times ceases to exist as a newspaper from this date—it having been purchased by the proprietor of the Herald, and will hereafter be merged in that enterprising penny journal.

The Indian Massacres in Minnesota.

Chicago, Thursday, April 23.

The runners returned to Fairbault from the pursuit of the Indians, confirm the rumored massacre in Blue Earth County. Forty settlers were murdered at Big Bend and several women carried off. Great alarm was everywhere felt. All the Indians beyond the Minnesota River have assumed a hostile attitude. Rumors are rife that there is an alliance of Sioux and Chippewas.

Arrival of the Khersonese at Portland.

Portland, Thursday, April 23.

The steamship Khersonese, Captain Thompson, from Liverpool and St. Johns, N. F., and Halifax, arrived here at 9½ o'clock this morning, with three hundred and eighty-seven passengers.

The Dew-Drop.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times:

Pensacola, Fla., Thursday, April 16, 1857.

The schooner Dew-Drop, containing the students of Williams College, and other scientific gentlemen, who have been making collections of specimens of the natural history of this State, has just arrived at this port from Key West, and leaves to-morrow for New-York. No accident of any sort has occurred to mar the happiness of the trip, and the collections are very large.

One of the party is suffering from a slight coup de soleil—but when you receive this will be at his home in New-York, having taken the mail route.

Faithfully yours, A. P. S.

THE TARGET PARADE.

The Regular and the Irregular Forces—The Review in the Park—Muskets, Music and Banners.

When New-York awoke yesterday morning, its first thought was to leap out of bed, and look at the weather. Was it favorable for the Great Parade? With a lively remembrance of last Monday, and the fate of the suspension bridge over the Genesee, broken down with the weight of snow, fresh in its recollection, the question was a momentous one. But a single glance at the azure vault dispelled all evil forebodings. It was fair. There would be no further postponement. The parade would come off.

For it had been so much talked about, so much commented on in the newspapers, for several months past, and Mayor Wood and the Sachems of Tammany, political capital, Democratic wire-pulling, and all the ramifications and twistifications of party, had had, according to popular opinion, as much to do with it, that New-York, male and female, (the ladies of course only for the music and the holiday,) wondered what was going to happen, and visions of from 12,000 to 30,000 men, indefinitely dated, parading the streets in uniform, with muskets either bought and paid for, or loaned by Gideon Law, floated before their dazzled imaginations. It was generally supposed that it would be six or seven hours passing through any street, Broadway, for instance, and so nobody was surprised when the companies were notified to assemble and fall into order at Fourteenth-street, as early as 9¾ o'clock A. M., and that the march was to commence at 10¼ o'clock precisely.

At 9½ o'clock there were but few signs of a parade. An hour later several companies had arrived. The First Division, Major-General William Wilson, was formed on the north side of Fourteenth-street; the Second Division, Major General Creighton, on the south side. All the other regiments were formed according to the order of their Wards. The visiting companies, among whom were the Scottish American Light Guard, and the Arcade Guard, both from Sing Sing, the Independent Guard from Hastings, the Isaac Edge, Jr., Guard from Jersey City, and the Forty Acres Guard, and Union Ferry Guard, from Brooklyn, were formed into a division on Washington Parade Ground. The latter company made a very good appearance. A neat model of an East River ferry-boat was borne in advance of them, and attracted much attention.

It was past 12 o'clock before the procession started. First went the Commander-in-Chief, Henry Wilson, the originator of the whole parade. He was attended by his Aids and Staff. Among the latter were Wm. H. Darrow, the Adjutant-General; Samuel C. Thompson, Inspector-General; Lloyd Aspinwall, Commissary-General; B. F. Chamberlin, Engineer-in-Chief; J. Mansfield Davis, Quartermaster-General; George P. Andrews, Judge Advocate General; Charles W. Darling, Paymaster, and H. E. Davis, Jr., Military Secretary. Next came the visiting companies in order, and then the New-York companies—the First Division, Major-General William Wilson, his Aids and Staff, and nine regiments of that Division, the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, and Eleventh. These regiments included the First Ward Musketeers, the Fulton Guard, the Protection Volunteers, the Taylor Guard, the Tarrant Guard, the Washington Grenadiers, the Donovan Musketeers, the Continental Blues, the Frontier Guard, the Frontier Musketeers, the Brougham Light Guard, the Empire City Guard, the Roche Guard, the Harrison Guard, the Henry Lux Guard, the Harrington Guard, the Red Rover Guard, the Atlantic Guard, and the Fernando Wood Guard.

In the Second Division, Major-General Creighton, were ten regiments, the Thirteenth to the Twenty-Second. Among the staff we noticed S. A. Surdam, as Judge-Advocate, and Ex-Councilman Wild—not looking very reverent—as Chaplain. The Ex-Councilman's horse was somewhat restive, bringing his rider rather prominently into notice. In this Division were, among others, the Suffolk Light Guard, the Mulligan Guard, the Stephen Hughes Guard, the Social Guard, the Bradbury Guard, the Fifteenth Ward Independent Guard, the Carroll Guard, the Brennan Guard, the United Guard, the Seventeenth Ward Democratic Guard, the Thomas Davis Guard, the Friendly Guard, the Citizen Guard, the Atlantic Blues, the Eagan Guard, the Mazeppa Guard, the Kennedy Guard, the Cochrane Guard, the Tierney Guard, the Taylor Guard, the United Musketeers, the Murray Guard, the Iedex Guard, the Empire Guard, and the Coghlan Guard. In the two Divisions there were no less than twenty-four bands. Musicians, officers and men, all included, there were twenty-five or twenty-seven hundred in the parade. Of muskets there were not more than thirteen hundred. The whole procession was considerably less than an hour passing any one point, and disappointment was generally felt that it had fallen so far short of the expectations of its originators.

What there was of it, however, was very good. The companies, it is true, might have marched better, but of course they did not assume to compete with regiments regularly drilled. It was a very creditable display, indeed, and the circumstance most to be regretted about it was that the companies were not more numerous. The streets were well lined with spectators during its progress, and as the flags were streaming from all the hotels on Broadway, that thoroughfare presented a very gay appearance, the varied, and occasionally brilliant uniforms of the companies eliciting much attention and applause.

The front of the City Hall, where the line was to be reviewed by the Mayor and Common Council, was thronged at an early hour. It was past one o'clock when the procession, having passed through Chambers-street, entered the East gate of the Park, and marched before the Chief Magistrate of the City, who was regarded in the light of a sort of step-father to every full-blown or budding military man in the parade. That there might be no mistake, among so large a crowd, as to which was the Mayor, a Policeman waved over his Honor's head a flag of immaculate white silk, emblematic of purity, with the word "Mayor" inscribed thereon, surmounted by a semi-circle of gold stars. After the review was ended, the procession passed out of the Park into Broadway, thence to Park-row, and down Beekman-street to William, thence up Chatham-street to East Broadway, thence to Grand-street and the Bowery, thence up to Fourteenth-street, where the companies were dismissed.

There was another parade yet to come. At the first organization of the affair some months ago, it was suspected by a few Companies of the City that it was intended to have a political bearing, and that Mayor Wood was to be glorified thereby. Consequently there were some bolters who resolved to get up an independent parade on their own account. Several attempts were made from time to time to unite them with the regular body, but without success, and yesterday the Independent Companies, under the command of Grand Marshal Thomas Benedict, formed into line in East Broadway, and marched down Broadway and around Park-row, up Chatham-street and the Bowery to Fourteenth-street, where they dismissed. They comprised the Frontier Guards, the Madison Light Guards, the Hoffmire Guards, the Dupignac Musketeers, and three companies of the Peterson Light Guards. They had four Bands, including one of Dodworth's. It was generally remarked that they marched better, and presented a more soldierly appearance than any portion of the "regular" parade. Mayor Wood did not wait to review these companies, who were generally designated as the Anti-Wood party.

Such was the parade of yesterday. It was not all that was expected of it, after the loud and long flourish of trumpets that had heralded it for many weeks. If it had come off last Monday, as intended, it would doubtless have been much better. As it was, it gave a large number of sight-seers considerable enjoyment, and therefore cannot be classed as a failure.

But a few words about this volunteer citizen soldiery—these target companies as they are called—which are entirely independent and distinct from the New-York State militia, which is a force existing by law. Those who made Union-square, Washington Parade ground and Broadway noisy yesterday, with sounds of martial music, were made up of companies of firemen, and of another large force with which our residents are familiar, namely, the workmen of various factories, foundries, ship-yards, in companies of Guards, for the most part taking the names generally of the proprietors of the establishments at which they are employed. This class, as well as the companies of firemen who display themselves as soldiers, equip themselves, engage tuition in military exercises, hire their drill-room, and, in a word, provide everything needful (or their organization, at their own cost. They find their remuneration for the outlay in the enjoyment of a day's target-shooting, which carries with it an excursion into the country, and a "good time" generally.

We believe that this precise description of soldiery is peculiar to New-York. No other city of the Union has a similar force in sufficient numbers to invite description. In Europe there are organizations which in some respects resemble this. Berlin has its Burgher Garde, in which is enrolled the whole number of burghers—perhaps twenty-five thousand. Every September some five or six thousands of this force enjoy encampment, of from two days to two weeks in length, on the banks of the Spree, when the good burghers of Prussia's capital turn out generally, and make a gala-day among their soldier brethren. But this is a municipal force, and is under direction of the burgomaster—or, as we should say, the mayor—of the city. It will be understood, of course, that this force has no connection with the Landwehr, or militia, of Prussia, which embodies the entire male population of the kingdom, under the age of forty-five. For this force, when called into actual service, four hundred thousand stand of arms repose in the Zeughaus, or Arsenal, at Berlin.

The plain of Waterloo annually witnesses a review and encampment of the citizen military of Belgium—the Garde Nationale—under the direction of the Commandant-General. This force elects its own officers, and is independent of the State. It sprang up in 1830, when Belgium won its freedom. The Garde Nationale of Paris has ceased to exist. It expired of the coup d'état of the Second of December, 1851, after which the citizens were disarmed. It had its day in the revolutions of 1830 and 1848, was born of the Revolution of 1789, and died of the empire of 1852, after an existence under Bourbon kings of two stripes, the consulate and empire of Napoleon, divers Directories and Republics of several hues from Mirabeau to Marrast. Austria had once its National Guard, the Burgermilitz, which was a force made up of the citizens of the various cities of the empire. The peasants, Bauer, were never allowed to bear arms. This latter class has taken, since 1848, the name of Economes, given to it by some admirer of Greek and liberty, and repudiates the term boor, or Bauer. In the good time of 1848, the day of liberté, solidarité and fraternité, the Burgermilitz took the name of the Garde Nationale. The Emperor, in 1849, as soon as his troubles were over, repaid this assumption by extinguishing the force.

In Norway has its citizen force, Storthsing, composed of burghers of the various towns, and of peasants as well, who enjoy their annual reviews. Holland has also a volunteer militia—a burgher force, and Holstein has one also. The Free Cities, Lubeck, Hamburg, Bremen and Frankfort, have a burgher militia. Every citizen is compelled to bear arms and to provide and keep uniform, and even ammunition.

This year is the first time in which the target and fire companies have undertaken to appear under brigade and division organization. They have elected Major-Generals, who have appointed full Staffs, and issue their general orders in regular military style and with all the "pomp and circumstance" of war. Next year the admirers of the new organization say they shall have twenty thousand troops "in the field"—if such a term can be applied to the peaceful streets of this money-making metropolis. We wait to see whether, in succeeding years, the new organization will come to be a power in the State.

THE POLICE COMMISSION.

Motion to Render Perpetual the Injunction Against the Police Commissioners—Power of the Mayor to Bring the Suit.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term—April 23.

Before Hon. Justice Davies.

Fernando Wood vs. James W. Nye, et al.—At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the argument in this case was taken up pursuant to the modification granted late yesterday afternoon. His Honor the Mayor was present, together with several of the Police Commissioners, and a number of spectators. After some discussion as to upon whom devolved the affirmative, Judge Davies remarked that as this was a case of great importance he thought that perhaps it would be best to have it argued first at the General Term.

Judge Edmonds—We are ready to submit to any order your Honor may make.

Mr. Evarts stated that he would consent to this arrangement if the temporary injunction against the Commissioners were removed, but otherwise he could not properly do so; the deposing of the new Commissioners from office did not necessarily reinstate the previous power, and much confusion would therefore ensue.

Judge Edmonds said that he had no objection as to the mode or manner in which the cause was decided. Notwithstanding the change of time from Saturday to to-day, they were ready to go on; but he could not consent to withdraw the injunction, because it would deprive the City of a legal police, and subject it to all the confusion attending such a state of affairs. It was a well-established law, that a person in office, until discharged or others were appointed in his place, continued to possess his power. The Mayor had the power over the Police Department de facto. He was ready to have the cause laid over to some other day, or refer it to the General Term, but not to withdraw the injunction.

His Honor remarked that he would sit for a couple of hours this evening, but he must then adjourn the case until Saturday.

Mr. Field inquired of His Honor if this was not the most important case that could be tried.

His Honor stated that he had the Circuit to attend to, which would occupy him until Saturday.

Finally it was decided to proceed, and Mr. Edmonds read the complaint, a very full abstract of which was published in yesterday's Times.

Mr. Evarts read an affidavit of Simeon Draper testifying to the meeting of the new board and mentioning that he was chosen President, and stating the various officers elected.

Mr. Edmonds stated that the question was distinctly, and merely, a question of the constitutionality of the act. In the first place, what was due to the public good for the Mayor to do under the very extraordinary circumstances surrounding him? He saw the dangers of pursuing any course; confusion on the one hand, the involving the whole peace and public good of the City on the other.

If he consulted his own case, he would have taken no action whatever. For the public good, however, he saw no alternative but to arrest the impending conflict in its outset. If His Honor decided that the law is constitutional, &c., and interposes no injunction, and the law is finally decided to be unconstitutional, the evil resulting would be almost incalculable. This would be saved in the other case, by the Mayor's ability to rule de facto.

He admitted that he was asking his Honor to decide a very delicate matter; to step in, a single judge, between the Legislature and the people, but it was not the first time that the courts had done the same thing, and in this connection he called attention to the following authorities: 1 Kent, 452; 4 Hill, 144; 3 Selden, 97, 99, 109, 119; 1 Story, chapt. 4; 2 Kernan, 863.

Mr. Field—Did you ever hear of any direct appeal to the Court to pronounce a law unconstitutional?

Mr. O'Conor—This is not such a case.

Mr. Field—Yes, it is.

Mr. O'Conor—No, it is not.

His Honor—(rapping)—Gentlemen must speak one at a time, and not interrupt each other.

Mr. O'Conor—I only came to the rescue of my friend. I will not interrupt.

Mr. Edmonds continued: He referred to Sec. 3, Art. 10, of the Constitution, which, after providing for the appointment of City officers, provided for County, Town, or District officers, and this was one of the provisions which he claimed was violated by the bill in question. Nothing was more desired by the framers of the Constitution than the decentralization of the power of the State, and this was a point important to be viewed. By the Constitution of 1846 the power was much centralized. The Governor had the command, almost entirely, of appointing even the sub-officers.

The progress of dispersion of power advanced step by step among the people—the multiplication of the election districts, the change from the appointment of our judiciary, &c. If he was right in this supposition as to the intention of the framers of the Constitution, then the law in question must be viewed but as an invasion. Did the law come from inability on the part of the people of this Metropolitan Police district to choose their own municipal officers?

So far as the police of this City and county were concerned, up to 1847 it was an entirely local matter, confined to this City and county. The Police Department was in existence, and it was a question whether this new law establishes any new office at all; whether it was an office created by this law. The

PARIS GOSSIP.

What is the Use of Landlords?—New Suggestions for Marriage—Astonishing Scarcity of Blondes in Paris—Editors in the Fashions—The Opera—Theatre-Turning—New Plays.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Thursday, March, 19, 1857.

Recently a pamphlet gained great notoriety in Paris, entitled Pourquoi les Propriétaires? ("What is the Use of Landlords?") The book proposed nothing more nor less than that the Government should be wiped over this vampire class of human beings, that they should be expropriated or suppressed, and the Government put in their place. Instead of expropriating the City in detail, as the Government is now doing, for the erection of palaces, and the opening of wide streets and squares, the author proposed an expropriation en masse, and for the same cause. Petition publique. Every house should have a fixed rent, and sonebody should become public functionaries, whose nomination must appear in the official columns of the Moniteur! And notwithstanding you believe that this monstrosity has arrived at its fourth edition, that it has made a great sensation, and that the Government gives a sort of acquiescence to its official socialism by remaining silent?

M. Paul de Musset, another pamphleteer, attacks the Parisians with a proposition of another character, but still in the category of expropriation—the expropriation of marriageable girls. M. de Musset, whose mental condition we are assured has been committed to the inspection of three known doctors, tries to establish the fact that the greater part of the social evils of the day are to be attributed to the fastidious manner in which marriages are contracted. The object of his book is to induce the government to interfere and in a measure guarantee these high ends of social life. He believes that the description as to character, state of fortune, morality, the disproportion of ages, the intermediation of match-makers, will all disappear with his system. Extending the duties of the concierge or porter of each house (and here he fails in unison with the bachelor-author) the author proposes that this person shall be held to keep a correct journal of the conduct of all his lodgers, with a column for observations where shall be recorded with fidelity all acts that may have a bearing upon marriage; the hour at which they enter at night, the persons they receive, whether there are any constable's visits; the cards, journals, letters, entibles, supplements they receive. All these facts are to be deposed in a central special depôt for such matters for the inspection of those concerned. No one should marry past the age of thirty, five, neither should a blonde complexion be married to a dark one; he anticipates great results from an intelligent mingling of temperaments. For instance, a dark complexioned male pays his addresses to a blonde, and they agree to get married. They start to the altar with a firm and confident step. But they are arrested. The marriage is not possible; all the disappointed blondes are inscribed for a month past. A decree has been demanded from the Bidoc; he must wait for their arrival. The author also devotes himself to the question of the future of France. The girls must subscribe their names when they wish a husband, and wait their turns when, they are rare, or when the demand is great. But M. de Mousseaux forgot, in his calculation, consideration: he does not tell us who is to be charged with the grave responsibility of trying to guarantee for the girls.

I speak from view of blondes. The admirers of blondes in France are alarmed at the growing scarcity of this species of female beauty, and they, too, are adopting means to arrest the rapid extinction of the race! Of three or four hundred actresses in Paris, there are but two blondes—Mlle. Emmanuel of the Vaudeville, charged lately to Madame Lafarge, and Mlle. Dupuis, of the Théâtre Français. Two meetings of a society, formed ostensibly for the conservation and propagation of this type of female beauty, have taken place in Paris. The members of the society are of the golden youth of the Boulevard; each of whom is bound never to marry, neither with the right hand nor the left, other than a blonde. An entire regiment at the dinner which followed the last meeting, of the Twelfth Arrondissement, to muster a respectable number of ladies of this complexion; but the regiment proved the scarcity of the country in the tongues, and the meeting finally to question.

Some time ago I, and perhaps others, announced that the Emperor had set an example in the article of dress, which, it was hoped, would be followed by a considerable population in some of the present exaggerations. This announcement seemed to make some sensation across the water, which shows that the evil could be a great one with you, or so insignificant a circumstance in itself could not have attracted so much attention. I am, therefore, bold to give a history of the reform.

The Emperor and the ladies of the Court did appear on the occasion of the ball referred to with a very considerable diminution in the circumference of their petticoats; it appears, that this was only an experiment for, at the two subsequent balls, the former dimensions were assumed again. Within a fortnight, however, a new movement has been put on foot, which (unless I mistake) sooner or later, to bring the extravagant petticoats to reasonable dimensions. This is unmovement inaugurated by a club of noble dames of the Faubourg St. Germain, to bring the style of dress back to the elegant simplicity of the time of Louis XV. and Louis XVI. It is to be effect an open war against the extravagance of lace and other kinds of useless trimmings, and secondarily a war on crinolines; for with a plain trimmed dress the present dimensions of the skirt would be more apparent, and, consequently, more ridiculous. The statement has been made to me that I heard a celebrated dressmaker say a dress of two ages ago (say two weeks, she said) took not half an inch of lace on a dress, and that she made all her dresses with only a dozen yards of silk in the skirt; whereas the skirts of the ladies are made long, so as to fill an hoop, and the sleeves are still very large, so that the same quantity of silk is used as before. This is the real state of the dressing question I believe.

Paris contrasts the great proportions of Adelaide, Queen of Naples, notwithstanding the advantageous side of the science of astronomy, and its general diffusion among the people, was any representation of Paris to the end of the world more firmly fixed than this. The ridicule of the caricaturists will go a great way in dispelling the fears of the populace, but it is a fact that many, very many people in France, are laying self-reserves in contracts and other business affairs, in view of this eventuality! Fortunately the theatres has seized upon this subject as a pretext for a number of amusing vaudevilles, and of pièces de circonstance, which will aid the caricaturists. To begin at the top, the little Folies Nouvelles has already produced a piece in five tableaux for the pantomimist Paul Legrand, entitled "The 12th of June, or the End of the World."

Rush, the great table-turning humbug, contributes not a little to this unsettled state of the superstitious. The spirit-rap game is playing is a deep and dangerous game. Its lives rejected, shakes of himself a great number, half rejected, who will of the invitations to dine or to evening parties. He goes only to the houses of the highest officials of the Government. The journals, glad to find so good a subject for developing a sensation, give startling details of this man's past life, his antecedents and his personal habits—all of which are colored in the several authors' brains and whose lowest of truth as that Home is an American, or a pale young man of twenty years of age, who lived in dens the spirits that pursue him. Home allows the journals to talk, for he is making money and is satisfied.

A play has just been brought out at the Palais Royal, entitled "Which Husband of the Rose?" The principal characters are Marguerite Gauthier, of the "Dame aux Camélias;" Mars, of the "Filles de Marbre;" and the Survente d'Ange, of the "Demi-Monde." These three characters are filled by Rayer, Delaunay and Hyacinthe, and the piece has had a great success. As a commentary on the title of the piece, the police reports offer us this week, in the shape of a suicide, a very striking proof of what becomes of the roses. The cadaver of a woman was found in the bottom of a well, whom the Commissary of Police found, after an inquest, had stated nothing but the truth in the following lines found in her pocket: "I am, to-day, forty-six years old; my name is F * * *. When I was young I was handsome; I shone at Paris, where I was known by the name of La Petite Marquise. I had a city and a country house, domestics, carriages, &c. Arrived a humble society. A year later I was ugly. Another year, and all I possessed was sold. Then commenced for me a wretched existence, living on public charity, constantly turned from hospital to hospital, for they would not have long near—I was incurable! Day before yesterday, they again drove me from the hospital. What could I do? I have but one resource—the Seine. Let the world find my body, pray for me."

The candidates for the Chair of the late M. de Salvandy, as one successor of Prosper are M. Emile Ollivier, M. de Lavergne, M. de Marcellus, M. Philarète Chasles, and M. Théophile Gautier. But the chances are about evenly divided between the first two named.

M. Philarète Chasles, the well-known linguist, Member of the Academy of Sciences, has it in contemplation to found a monthly review at Paris, devoted to American interests and American news. The plan, however, is not yet organized.

The great theatrical success of the day, since the appearance of the Question d'Argent is that of La Flammes, a comedy in four acts, at His Majesty's theatre, the Comédie Française, by M. Mario Uchard. It has been so long since the first French theatre has had a success, that this one has taken the town by surprise. What is more remarkable still, to the literary part of the town especially, M. Uchard is a banker, or rather a speculator at the Bourse, and this is his first literary attempt. He knows nothing of the theatre other than his experience with M'lle Madeleine Rachel, a distinguished actress of the French theatre, who was formerly his wife, and who is now playing at St. Petersburg. La Flammes would play well on a New-York stage.

A new piece at the Ambigu, entitled the "Orphans of Charity" is founded upon a history so singular that I cannot abstain from giving it to you. It is the history of a young girl of Amsterdam who has the executioner for guardian, for, according to the author, M. Darmay, there is a law in Holland which condemns to marriage or death every seducer of an orphan adopted by the State. Thus the heroine of the piece, Francis, is ambitious, and she has conceived the idea of marrying a nobleman, and of becoming a great lady. So she lays a trap for a foreigner who does not know the law. Count D'Albret, a Frenchman, who finds after having embraced too warmly his new acquaintance, that his retreat is cut off by the scaffold. "You must marry my lord," she says, "or mount the scaffold! Your hand or your life?" But the Count d'Albret loves Frederika Van del Bory, the daughter of the grand Pensionnaire. He refuses, and accepts death rather than betray his affianced for this perfidious intriguant. Then commences the struggles, plots and counterplots of the play, till it is discovered that Francis is the illegitimate daughter of Madam Van del Bory, the sister of the one of whom she threatened to destroy the happiness. Then she repents, cries, and wants to die; and, as the State only cares for its children, it is found that, since Francis is the child of some one, she is no longer an orphan, and M. d'Albret has no longer anything to fear from the Draconian code of the Netherlands. It would, indeed, have been cruel for a Dutch executioner to have cut off the head of a French nobleman for so this a sin.

The Italian Opera closes here on the 31st of the month, and La Ristori succeeds the 2d of April. "Puritani" has been put on the bill, to bring Steffanoni, and another artist known to you, M. Corvisart, before the public. The success of Steffanoni, as usual, was up to any of her successes of the early part of the season, while that of M. Corvisart was only mediocre.

The Shocks of Puritanism—Kalloch—The New Paper—Greene & Co's Failure—The Affair of Willis, the Spiritualistic Student—The Abbe'ss of Rev. Mr. Higginson—The Gewebam Comfortable but Undignified—The Suffolk Bank—Mr. Barry's Mistake—A New Play.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

BOSTON, Monday, April 20, 1857.

There has been a long interval between my last letter to you and the date of this present epistle, which, Heaven forbid that I should review. We have suffered many and rude shocks from discoveries and trials of very carnal crimes, and I prefer to leave time to work the necessary disinfection, rather than to stir the dirty heap now. People, however, still "talk Kalloch," and will continue to do so, I presume, so long as that reverend gentleman continues in the pastoral charge of his flock of three thousand Tambs at the Tremont Temple. He has succeeded, certainly, in pulling the wool over their eyes completely, and no Charles Honeyman ever drew fuller houses or more sympathizing tears. They gave him a "donation party" the other night, at which Donald McKay, the ship-builder, indorsed his character for chastity, and the sum of $1,000 was collected. In the vast desert of the world's hard heartedness and unbelief, it is refreshing to stumble on such a verdant oasis of simplicity as the donors must have occupied when they were thanked for their benefaction by Mr. Kalloch. Personally, Mr. Kalloch is said to be a very agreeable man, fluent in conversation, and possessed of original ideas and powers of expression. He is quite a young man, and very good looking. Photographs of him are on exhibition at many print stores, and still attract crowds to the windows within which they lie—principally of women. It is also noticeable that his congregations at the Tremont Temple are three-fourths feminine.

The new Boston paper, the Traveller, enters to-day upon its second week. The kind notices with which it was heralded by the rest of the Boston press have been succeeded by quite virulent and vinegary paragraphs, for it has begun to cut deeply into the subscription and advertising lists of all the other two cent papers. It is, as you of course have observed, rather a medley at present, but when it has sailed a little further on its voyage, and has got its sea-legs on, you can judge better of its merit. It was appointed the official journal of the State on Saturday.

In some of the notices of the failure of the American Banking-house of Gaudet & Co., in Paris, I have observed it stated that it was a Boston house. Its founder was Samuel Welles, a Bostonian. Many years after its establishment, John E. Greene became his partner, and upon his death, his successor. Mr. Greene, himself, died six years ago, and the business has been conducted since 1851 by his sons-in-law.

The affair of Mr. Willis, a divinity student at Cambridge, who has been suspended by the Faculty of the Theological School, for participation in "spiritualistic" performances, attracted much attention here a fortnight ago, and is now exciting indignation against the Faculty. I have heard accounts of his spiritualistic exploits in Roxbury, Salem, Worcester and Cambridge, as well as in Boston, of a most wonderful character; and Rev. Thomas Wentworth Higginson, of Worcester, has just published an affidavit, attested by oath, narrating a variety of his performances which are equally extraordinary—such as causing a tune to be played by an accordeon, which he held in one hand only; causing also a guitar to play, without the touch of hands, an accompaniment to a difficult Portuguese air which Mr. Higginson sang, and which he was confident could not be known to a dozen persons in the country besides himself; tipping heavy marble slabs on the tops of tables, &c. Mr. Higginson's reputation as a man of veracity is above suspicion, although since his participation in the Worcester Disunion Convention, I have doubted his common sense.

The case of Mr. Willis came before the Faculty on the complaint of Professor Eustis of the scientific school, who is a violent man, led often by eccentric impulses. He was present at a "gathering" at which Mr. Willis was to perform, and intercepted Willis' leg beneath the table in a position in which he thought it possible that it might be used to tap on a drum on which the "spirits" were expected to beat a tune. He seized him immediately and proclaimed him a cheat. Willis offered to give the Theological Faculty opportunity to test in the most thorough manner the phenomena which he produced, with a view to establishing his honesty. They declined his offer, and have suspended him from the school. I have no doubt, from what I have heard of the case, that both they and Prof. Eustis had acted unjustifiably. Prof. Eustis himself violated the condition on which he was allowed a seat at the table, when he seized Willis' leg.

The result of the affair must be that a thorough and scientific examination will be made by competent persons into the nature of the phenomena which are sworn to be produced. Many of our most respectable citizens are determined that such an investigation shall be made, and this case of Mr. Willis has been discussed in all our scientific and literary circles.

In politics there is nothing going on which would interest you. A call for a Republican State Convention has been withdrawn for reasons of policy. Our Legislature bids fair to sit through the Spring far into the Summer. It has done very little since it met in January, and complaints of its dilly-dallying are arising everywhere. As a bit of gossip which illustrates the free and easy manners which have become popular at the State-House, I may mention that a gentleman of my acquaintance called in business hours a day or two ago on Governor Gardner at the Council Chamber, and found him situated as follows: His legs were propped against the chimney higher than his head, he held in his mouth a lighted cigar, and had practised on the carpet the vile and American habit of expectoration. A well-known politician sat side by side with His Excellency in a similar position. The gentleman transacted his business as speedily as possible and retired. Oh, shades of our venerable, departed Excellencies, and spirit of the still subsisting Everett, how must you have frowned upon the scene, especially upon the attitude!

The alteration of the Suffolk Bank building, in State-street, is progressing rapidly. The heavy granite pillars have all been removed.

Mr. Barry, the manager of our Boston Theatre, has certainly run a Don Quixote tilt against a windmill, in the letter in which he assails Fanny Kemble for her fancied defamation of the stage, for, I see, Rev. Mr. Bellows, of your City, states that she never wrote such a letter. Considering the spicy character of Mr. Barry's letter, enthusiastic people have whispered of a "cowhiding," but surely such people must be sarcastic.

A new play, or rather an old one entirely remodeled, is to be brought out at the Museum to-night, entitled "The Duchess."

FROM KANSAS.

The New Governor—Political Movements—Progress of Emigration.

WYANDOT, K. T., Monday, April 6, 1857.

The great item of political interest in Kansas at present is the change of Territorial Governors. The resignation of Governor Geary took the country by surprise, but it was believed that he would be reappointed and return armed with full powers to administer the Government which the United States claims as its right over the Territory. The appointment of Mr. Walker was of course a most startling one, and was the cause of much apprehension among the conservative citizens here. The regret that Geary had not been reinstated was general, and his abandonment by the Executive was a bad sign with which to indicate the policy of his successor. It was known that for weeks before Geary's departure East, all military power had been taken from his hands by Pierce; and it was a knowledge of this fact on the part of Buchanan and his friends which emboldened them to pursue the reckless course which had so fatal a result. The complicity of the Administration with the ultra Pro-Slavery Party was as evident, here as in any part of its preceding history. It was hoped and believed, even by student Republicans, that Mr. Buchanan would hold himself above such degrading factional alliances, and pursue a course consonant at once with true policy and justice. This hope may not prove groundless, but the reported instructions of Mr. Walker have given it a tremendous shock. If it is true that he is to administer the Government on the basis that the bogus laws are valid, and accept the scandalous act for the formation of a Pro-Slavery constitution as just, and sustain it in the face of the adverse sentiments of the population, then it is true that the policy of the present Administration follies precisely with that of Atchison and his colleagues here. This is to prove his Administration a continuation of that of Jeff. Davis, and to verify, even sooner than was expected, the forebodings of the Republicans during the Presidential canvass.

Notwithstanding these ominous indications, the belief is general on all sides, that no more civil strife is possible here. All parties concur in this. In Missouri, a powerful conservative party is resolved that there shall be no repetition of the outrageous invasions of the past. A strong Anti-Slavery feeling has been evolved there from the agitation of the last two years, and the question of emancipation is already conceded to be debatable; a great admission on the part of the ultraists, who have lately exercised dominion with an iron rod. And in St. Louis, the focus of these liberal ideas, the question of emancipation is discussed with a warmth which promises almost to disturb the peace of the City.

Meantime the emigration is immense. Boats come up the Missouri laden with four to five hundred emigrants, the great bulk of whom are Free-State in principle. The roads through Missouri and Iowa are black with wagons, whose occupants are evidently coming to Kansas to stay. Many bring teams to break the prairie, and drive in their own cows and young stock; and not unfrequently we can see a large Accomp rigged on the rear of the wagon, containing enough feathered occupants to make a respectable poultry yard one of the fixed institutions of the "claim." The emigration at present must exceed a thousand per day; and it is believed this is but trifling compared with that which will loom up in May and June. With this movement no sane man can doubt that the destiny of Kansas is inevitably to be Free-dom—and this in spite of all efforts at Washington or otherwhere to the contrary.

LITERAL.

Things in Kansas.

Mr. Brown, editor of the Herald of Freedom, at Lawrence, publishes an elaborate apology for the temporary discontinuance of that paper during his absence, all hands having been infected with the claim-speculating mania. Very little else besides land speculations is now talked of in Kansas.

Jonathan Lyman, publisher of the Kane County Journal in Illinois, has sold out, and will start a new free soil paper in Kansas.

A letter from Lawrence declares that a large majority of the men who are numbered in the new census lists as voters, have not the remotest idea of removing to Kansas, and without the shadow of a doubt scores have never seen the claims made in their names. The manner in which these lists are made up in place of complying with the law, is proof positive that the whole plan is nothing else than a scare crow operation. In hundreds of instances there is no house built, no land plowed, no fencing completed or commenced, in a word nothing done, save a stick thrust into the ground, or four poles thrown together. I state what I know from personal observation, having ridden over the Reserve in all directions. I have the statement of an unimpeachable witness who has examined the census returns, that not over one fourth of the voters in this county are registered.

A Company in Lawrence have purchased a portion of the lands contiguous to Delaware, on the Missouri River, five miles below Leavenworth, and have laid it out into town lots.

Another outrage was committed near Easton, on Sunday, by the Deputy Sheriff of Leavenworth County, Meredith Speer. He had a warrant for the arrest of Mr. Martin Kline, on the charge of horse stealing. The affair occurred at the house of a Pro-Slavery man, where church service was held at the time. The Sheriff produced his warrant and read it. Mr. Kline refused to go at the time, but said he would go next day, (Monday.) The Sheriff then drew his revolver and fired five times at Kline, three balls taking effect. This occurred in the house, full of people during the service. Mr. Kline is known to be innocent of the charge against him.

FROM NEBRASKA.

Abandonment of Forts Pierre, Laramie and Kearney by the United States Troops—Its Effect upon Emigration and the Frontier—Pawnee Indians and the White Settlers—Immense Emigration to Nebraska—General News, &c.

OMAHA CITY, NEBRASKA TERRITORY, Tuesday, April 7, 1857.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

There is a general feeling of dissatisfaction prevalent amongst frontier settlers at the recent orders from the War Department, in which it is ordered that the only military posts, Forts Pierre, Kearney and Laramie, of Nebraska, are this season to be abandoned by the United States troops. Those stationed at Forts Laramie and Kearney at present are ordered to the Pacific and those at Fort Pierre are ordered down the river. After the goods or provisions are removed from Forts Kearney and Laramie, then those posts are to be deserted. What the effect will be upon the frontier it seems not difficult to predict.

Fort Pierre stationlie some 700 miles north of this place on the west bank of the Missouri River. Fort Kearney is some 115 miles west of this place, upon or near the trail of the emigration to Salt Lake, California and Oregon, and Fort Laramie is some 350 miles further. The former protects the upper Missouri Country from any inroad by savages in that section, whilst the two latter stations not only give assurance of protection to our frontier settlers, but is an efficient assistance and protection to the overland emigration. Were it not for the two latter posts, the Pawnees, Ogallahs, Brulé Sioux, and numbers of other warlike Indians, would control the entire country to the west of us, and the emigrant train that could run the gauntlet of the hordes that infest the plains would be a curiosity.

The effect of an abandonment of the two latter posts, particularly, cannot but be regarded as an unfortunate move for emigrants and frontier settlers. What the abandonment is ordered for I cannot conceive. Were it at a time when the intervening country was sufficiently settled by whites to afford a "home" protection against savage tribes, it would not appear so bad; but, just now, they are most needed, when frontier settlers require at least a shadow of military force to protect them from insult and rapine at the hands of their red brethren.

A short time since some danger was apprehended by our settlers back upon the Platte River from the Pawnee Indians, who had threatened them with annihilation unless they desisted from improving in that vicinity. I apprehend, however, no direct trouble from them so far as the settlers are concerned. Upon the plains, and particularly upon the emigrant trail, they are a thieving, ugly set of highwaymen; at home they are a dirty, filthy, lewd and thievish set of miserable beings. Why does not our Government take some prompt steps towards removing them from their present location upon the Omaha purchase, and amongst the white settlers, and locate them upon their own lands "farther west?" The interest of the Territory demands their immediate removal.

Already hundreds of emigrants are pouring into Nebraska from the States. Boats and stages come heavily laden, and hundreds more are on their way. There will be the largest emigration hither this season than perhaps to any other section of our Union—yet "there's room enough for all." The land office here is daily visited by numbers of preemption claimants, who are proving up and paying for their land. Farmers throughout the Territory are preparing for large crops this season. A great many of them are preparing to raise a crop of the Chinese sugar cane. The weather is pleasant, and boats are constantly arriving.

Indian Depredations in Minnesota—Removal Burning of Mankato—Butchery of the Inhabitants.

From the Dubuque Herald.

We learn from Mr. Sherman, of Red Wing, that intelligence had been received at that point on Wednesday last that a band of Indians, about 600 in number, had been committing depredations in the vicinity of Mankato. The rumor said that Mankato was burned and the inhabitants murdered. There can be no doubt that several families have been destroyed. The Indians are a dissatisfied band of Sioux, and are doubtless the same who attacked the settlements at Spirit Lake, of which the readers of the Sentinel and Herald have already received the full particulars. The inhabitants in the valley are crowding into St. Peters for protection. Troops from Fort Ridgely were in pursuit of these wandering Indians, and cavalry had been ordered from Fort Snelling. No little panic existed through the country, and active measures were being taken to drive the hostile band from the country. We also learn from our informant that the settlers murdered at Spirit Lake were originally from Red Wing; Mankato is about eighty miles from Red Wing, and about twelve from St. Peters.

Collision in the East River.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—April 22.

Before Judge Nelson.

DECISIONS IN ADMIRALTY.

Dennis Fagan and others vs. the steam-tug Pluto.—Nelson, C. J.—This libel was filed by the owners of the schooner Charles Hopkins against the Pluto, to recover damages for a collision in the East River. The wind was southwest and the tide ebb; the schooner was beating down the river on her larboard tack, and was crossing from the Brooklyn to the New-York side, towards the foot of Jackson-street; the Pluto was coming up the river on the New-York side, with a heavy tow on her larboard quarter; she was ascending against the tide at a rate of speed not to exceed a quarter or a half a mile an hour. The schooner came about nearly ahead of the tug, and sagged down upon her, causing the damage that occurred. The person in charge of her did not see the Pluto until he had come about, or was in the act of coming about. He might have run nearer the New-York shore with safety before he tacked, and thus have avoided the collision. The tug stopped immediately, and seems to have done everything, under the circumstances, in her power to prevent the injury.—It is apparent that the cause of it is attributed to the want of a proper look-out on the schooner. If she had had such, the tug in time, the collision could have been easily avoided.

It is said that the Pluto was in fault in not being in the middle of the river, or as near as might be, regard being had to other vessels navigating it, as directed by the State law. But it does not appear that this omission led to the collision, or in any way contributed to it. It furnished no reason for the schooner's unnecessarily tacking almost ahead of the steamer. This was gross inattention to duty on the part of the person in charge of the vessel. The schooner at the time was not in command of its ordinary master, but in charge of one temporarily employed, and who was manifestly incompetent to navigate her at a place where skill and attention were indispensable.

The decree of the Court below, dismissing the libel, we think is right, and should be affirmed.

For appellant, Mr. Benedict and Mr. Malcolm.

For appellee, Mr. Bryan.

Thomas Bell vs. Thomas Hunt.—Nelson, C. J.—This is a libel filed by Bell to recover a balance due for raising and removing the steamboat Orbet off and from a sand-bar, at the mouth of Shrewsbury Inlet, N. J., where she had been stranded. It appears that Hunt owned the steamboat Orbet, which ran between the port of New York and Shrewsbury Inlet, and that her regular hauling failed. He employed and chartered the Orbet on the 5th July last, of Peck, the owner, to take her place, and then, while thus employed, she was stranded, as above stated.

The libelant, Bell, was engaged to get her off the sand bar for $3,100, of which sum a balance of $900 remains unpaid. The Court below decreed for the respondent and dismissed the libel.

There is no sufficient evidence that the contract was made by Hunt with the libellant for the service in question. On the contrary, the weight of it is that it was made by Peck, the owner. Hunt was present when it was made, but for aught that appears, took no part in the negotiation. Peck did. Indeed, the libellant was given to understand by Hunt, most distinctly to the proof, that Peck was the responsible man at the time the contract was made.

It is supposed that Hunt may be made liable as charterer to the libellant. But, aside from the consideration that the contract was made with Peck, and not with him, it does not appear upon what terms the Orbet was chartered. She may have been navigated by the master and hands of the owner, and hence the charterer not at all responsible for the safety of the ship. There is no foundation, therefore, laid for the inference sought to be raised of the liability of the respondent on this ground.

We think the decree below should be affirmed.

For appellant, Messrs. Owen and Vose. For appellee, Mr. Stoughton.

In the case of Alexander Cross vs. George Law, Mr. Lord concluded his summing up for the plaintiff this morning, and Judge Nelson then charged them. His charge was favorable to the plaintiff. The Jury were directed to bring in a sealed verdict to-morrow morning.

The United States vs. Juvenile Tools.—Counsel in this case commenced summing up this morning, but the procession in the streets made such a noise that the Court was compelled to adjourn. There are but two items of dispute in the accounts. Mr. Towle was appointed naval officer during the recess of Congress by President Tyler, on March 19, 1844. The statute giving him $3,000 a year as salary and his accounts being closed on Dec. 31, 1844, he deducted that sum from the fees received by him at that time. In July, 1844, his nomination was sent in to the Senate and by them confirmed, and Mr. Towle claims another $3,000 up to that time. He then claims another $3,000 from that time till Dec. 31, 1844, and another $3,000 from that date till May 31, 1845, when he was suspended by President Polk. He also claims $1,000, being $400 a year as extra compensation for keeping the accounts of the lighthouse and the hospital money.

This item of $1,000 the Government disallows entirely, and they disallow one of the items of $3,000.

Mr. Towle, also, claims to recover against the Government the sum of $950, paid by him to John B. Murray, in 1845, to redeem certain valuable books sent as a present by the Government of France to our Government, under the auspices of Mr. Vattemare, and which, on arrival here, were put in store, and by neglect allowed to be sold at auction for storage fees, and which were bought by Mr. Murray. This $950 the Government had never repaid to Mr. Towle, although the books were at once forwarded to Washington.

Mr. Towle also claims to recover at the rate of $3,000 a year for services rendered by himself as one of the Commissioners appointed by the Government to determine and pass upon packages that were destroyed in the great fire in 1835.

It is claimed by defendant's counsel that, as the accounts were rendered to the Government containing the disputed items, and as no action was taken upon them for years, they must be considered to have been passed upon by the accounting officers and cannot be reopened for investigation now.

Important Decisions in Admiralty.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—April 23.

Before Judge Betts.

CHARTER PARTY—CREWS—SEAMEN—WITNESS.

Charles H. Hayward vs. A Quantity of Timber, &c.—This libel was filed by the owner of the brig A. H. Wise to recover the amount of charter-money on a charter of the brig executed by the master for a voyage from this port to the port of Cambridge in Maryland with privilege of another port, the charterer agreeing to furnish a full cargo of timber and lumber. The vessel went to Cambridge, but there was not a full cargo there, and at the other port the master was informed that he could have the balance of his cargo if he would take certain timber. Deeming the timber too large to go on the brig, he declined to take it, and brought the part cargo to this port and claimed the full charter-money.

Held by the Court—That under the ruling of the Circuit Court of this District in the case of Boocher vs. Bennett, decided in September, 1853, the freighter violated his contract if he failed to supply the cargo stipulated, and of a size and shape, and at the sides of the ship in a condition fitted for being taken or stowed on board.

That the master is a competent witness, unless it is proved he has other interest in the cause than that of charterer. He gave the charter party as master and agent.

That the full cargo stipulated was not supplied at Cambridge, that the charterer having the "privilege of taking the timber on the rivers," deviated upon his 120 miles limit, he pointed out such limiting place to the master, and that sufficient timber was provided for her alongside the ship to complete the cargo.

Proof of the case is decided upon the issue as shaped by the pleadings, the claimant fails to prove that he procured his timber alongside of the vessel, which was much of her stowage so as to constitute a performance of his contract, and the libelant would accordingly be justified in returning to his home port and demanding damages consequent upon the breach of the charter-party.

That the claimant is estopped by the pleadings from denying that the charter-party was fulfilled in relation to the freight, and that the stowage in the charter-party.

Decree for libelant with a reference.

For libelant, Messrs. Beebe, Dean and Donohue; for claimant, Messrs. Price, Gerard and Sanding.

TOWING CONTRACT—MISTAKE.

Charles A. Hookstaber vs. The Steamboat Boston.—The libel was filed in this case by the owner of the canal boat Union, setting up that in December, 1854, the Philadelphia Steam Tug and Navigation Company, owners of the Boston, agreed to tow the Union with her cargo of coal from Philadelphia to New-York, and that the Boston did take her in tow at New-Brunswick, but by carelessness and negligence she was sunk on the way; and the libelant claimed to recover $6,500 for the value of the canal boat and her cargo.

By the Court—The undertaking sued upon in this case was not that of a common carrier, nor fully that of towage; the agreement to tow the canal boat from New-Brunswick to New-York being qualified with notice to the agent of the libelant that the canal boat would be allowed to go in the tug that day, but only at his risk, and that of her owners. It was at the close of navigation, and when the river was greatly impeded with [illegible] Gray Seven; she called me for a minute; that she had [illegible] by Gamer on her shoulder; the doctor then examined the lower part of her body from my side; I was then called out to the door; she then [illegible] on the chair; she sat down and [illegible] Gamer; I then took hold of her or of her clothes and supported them; again, and sat on the chair; he then told her to step back in her clothes; and she did so; I then left her in charge of Gamer; I went to the house where she was arrested of all her clothes; there is a two story house; [illegible] which being [illegible] Gamer; I then undressed her; she had [illegible] (Interrupted;) then undressed her; I found her nearly naked; taking her clothes partly up; that is all I heard, and all I have to say that I heard; [illegible] me to make one more remark—when she said to Dusty Gamer me or the Doctor was cured.—or Dusty said, I'm a physician.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cady Stanton; and the policeman [illegible] through the whole of the examination. A.—Very; they were in the room.

Q.—Did other persons come into your premises at No. 21 Bond-street upon the occasion referred to. [Objected to; witness answered.]

Q.—Were you in business in the year? A.—I was.

Q.—Were you detained or imprisoned at No. 21 Bond-street or elsewhere. [Objected to.]

The case before the Judge having been concluded, the examination was continued before him.

Mr. Sutton objected to the question and to the testimony of the witness on the stand, and to that of any other witness of what Dr. Woodward or any other person did, beyond the direction of the Coroner.

Question allowed.

By Mr. Sutton.—Begin at the beginning, and tell your story.

Witness.—I went to No. 21 Bond-street on the Sunday after the murder; the Policeman refused to let me see the body of Dr. Burdell; he told me to wait until the Coroner; when the Coroner had been there; I then went to my sister's in Great Jones-street, and returned at 5 o'clock; a Policeman and Mr. Howell stood at the foot of the stairs; I asked the Policeman if I could go up; he said not without an order from the Coroner; I asked Howell (the 21 Bond-street,) Sunday; I left quietly; I went home on Tuesday; I did not go home sooner, because I was ill.

Q.—Did you make application to go home, and to whom, and if so, when? A.—I made application to one of the policemen on Monday, to go home; he said I would have to wait until the Coroner got done.

Q.—Did you make application again for such permission, if so, please state when and to whom, and if after then you made application? A.—I waited until two weeks night, and then asked one of the policemen again, if I could go home, and he said no; I made other applications; one was made in the morning of Monday, another in the evening, when he told me the Coroner had left orders that I could not leave the house; I then told him I must go, for I had a family of children, or else I must send for my little one and have him brought over to me; the next application was on Wednesday night to Captain Dilks; he told me that the Coroner had given orders that I must be taken to the Station-house; I told him if he would let me go home he might send a Policeman with me, and I would come back next morning at nine o'clock; he told me no, it was out of the County, and he could not do it; I then wanted him to let me go to my sister's in Great Jones-street and stay, and that he might look the door and take the key with him; he told me no, he could not do that; he said the Coroner left orders that I should be taken to the Fifteenth Ward Station-house with the rest of the witnesses; I then begged of him to let me stay in the parlors there all night; but he refused me that; he then told officer Davis to take me home with him; I went and said with his family all night; on Thursday morning I returned to Bond-street, and my testimony was taken that day, after being confined one day in the tenement; on Tuesday I was taken to the Seventeenth Ward Station-house; I was brought to No. 21 Bond-street on Wednesday; the Deputy Coroner opened the front door and came out; he called to the Policeman who was with him, "Take those women back to the Station-House, and lock them up immediately, in the jail;" we went into the hose, down in the basement, and stood there till night, till the Coroner had gone; that was the night I was ordered to be taken to the Fifteenth Ward Station-House, and the night I stayed with Officer Davis' family.

The counsel for the Coroner objected to the Judge the testimony of this witness regarding what took place on the examination by the physician, and regarding her own detention and imprisonment, having been allowed on account of the difficulty or impossibility of separating what might be proper from that which was improper, and would that all her testimony in regard to what took place in the room, be struck from the record, which took place by the special and express direction of the Coroner, or in his presence, or with his knowledge previous, or his assent subsequently.

Motion denied. The Judge said he could not separate the evidence so as to distinguish what acts of Dr. Woodward were in conformity to the direction given to him by the Coroner, and what were not. That the witnesses present, when Mrs. Cunningham was examined by Dr. Woodward, might justly to what took place in their presence, and that it would be for the Coroner to approve how far what occurred was or was not in pursuance of the order given by the Coroner. [Exception taken.]

Q.—Did you enter into any bail bond to appear as a witness? A.—I did not.

Q.—How large is your family? [Question overruled.]

Cross-examined by Mr. Jordan.—Q.—Mrs. Denison, how were you related to Dr. Burdell; by marriage? A.—He was my own cousin to my husband.

Q.—Was there any relationship between you or your husband and Mrs. Cunningham? A.—Not that I know of.

Q.—When did you first become acquainted with Dr. Burdell? A.—Over twenty years ago.

Q.—Were you or your husband, or either of you, in the habit of visiting him during those twenty years, or any part thereof. A.—We were; I visited him in general.

Q.—For what purpose. A.—Both in a friendly and professional way.

Q.—How long have you been a married lady? A.—Over twenty years.

Q.—Were you taken into any station-house during that investigation. A.—I was; I was taken into the Seventeenth Ward Station-House on Tuesday, at about one or two o'clock.

Q.—How long were you kept there on that occasion? A.—Until Wednesday about ten A. M.

Q.—Where did you stay over night—in what part of the building? A.—In the Captain and Lieutenant's room.

Q.—Were you furnished with a bed, and did you sleep in it that night? A.—I did.

Q.—Were there any other ladies who slept with you? A.—There was another lady slept in the same room by the name of Mrs. Seymour.

Q.—Were you kindly and hospitably treated while there, or otherwise? A.—I was kindly treated by the Captain and Lieutenant.

Q.—Were the room and bed comfortable in which you slept? A.—Yes.

Q.—How far was that Station House from No. 21 Bond street—in what street and what number? A.—I cannot tell; it was not very near by; [it is corner of Fifth-street and First-avenue.—Reg.]

Q.—How did you go, and with whom, to the Seventeenth Ward Station House, that day? A.—I walked with an officer and a crowd behind us. They followed us to the door.

Q.—Did you or the officer walk or mingle with the crowd behind you? A.—I walked with the officer and the crowd was behind us; the officer stopped several times and tried to drive them back. (Counsel for the Coroner objected, moved that it be stricken out and that the witness be compelled to answer the questions propounded.)

The Judge ruled that the nature of the question, as to her mingling with the crowd, the witness might state all that occurred. Motion to strike out overruled.

Witness—Further answered. We did not mingle with them, they mingled with us; they touched my cape.

Q.—Did the officer use efforts to keep the crowd away or disperse them? A.—He did; he told me not to look around, but he turned himself several times and tried to keep them back.

Q.—On which story was the room where Mrs. Cunningham was examined by the Doctor? A.—Third story hall, front bedroom.

Q.—How large was it? A.—It was a small bedroom; about the usual size of hall bedrooms.

At this point the case was adjourned to Monday next at 10 o'clock A. M.

MARINE COURT.

Before Judge Thompson.

SERVING AN INJUNCTION—ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

Stone vs. Boyd.—This was an action for assault and battery. The plaintiff went to the premises of the defendant in the beginning of April to serve an injunction on the plaintiff partner, issued by the Supreme Court in the case of Champion vs. Hill and Boyd. The defendant came up to him and asked him what he wanted, to which question the plaintiff replied that he had some legal papers to serve, whereupon it was alleged the defendant seized him by the collar, kicked him and violently ejected him from the premises. Plaintiff had him arrested and taken to the station-house, but nothing further ever came of it. The jury found a verdict for plaintiff for $50.

BROOKLYN CITY COURT—Tuesday, April 23.

Before Hon. G. D. Culver, City Judge.

Joseph E. Page vs. George Wegner.—Inquest on a note. Verdict for plaintiff—damages $106 62. For plaintiff, Campbell & Schumacher; for defendant, R. M. Harrington.

John Butler and others vs. John R. Donelson, Treasurer, &c.—This action is brought to recover $90, the value of two chandeliers, furnished by plaintiff to Niagara Engine Company No. 6, of which defendant is Treasurer. The defense set up is that the property never was received by any member of the Company authorized to do so. Case still on. For plaintiff, Lewis E. Beach, Jr.; for defendant, D. P. Barnard.

THE METROPOLITAN BAY OUTRAGE.

The trial of Richard Lewis, for being concerned in this outrage, was commenced in the King's County Court of Sessions yesterday. The case for the prosecution was closed at 11 o'clock, when E. E. Huntley, Esq., for defendant, opened the defence to the Jury, and proceeded to take testimony. The case will be continued and probably concluded to-day.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Royal Mail Steamship America, which left Liverpool on the 11th inst., arrived at Halifax last evening, but owing to a continuance of the storm in Nova Scotia, and a disarrangement of the lines east of Portland, it was found impossible to telegraph her news. Efforts to get dispatches from Halifax by way of Quebec have also failed. We shall doubtless receive a summary of her advices in time for our First Evening Edition.

A dispatch from Washington to the Philadelphia Ledger states, on what purports to be reliable authority, that the action of our Government in increasing our naval force in the Isthmus waters meets the approval of Lord Napier, the British Minister, who was officially informed of the fact by a note from the State Department, as was also the Count de Sartiges, Minister from France. The latter, however, has not signified either his assent or dissent to the movement. The total number of vessels ordered to the Isthmus is ten—seven of which will be stationed at Aspinwall, and three at Panama. With so important a force, our Government is confident of effecting an early arrangement of the dispute.

We learn from Washington that the Department of the Interior has completed the organization of the Wagon-Road Corps, and that operations will be commenced with the least possible delay.

The rumored massacre by the Indians in Blue Earth County, Minnesota, is confirmed. Forty settlers were murdered at Big Bend, and several women were carried off. The greatest alarm is felt. It is stated that all the Indians beyond the Minnesota River have assumed a hostile attitude.

In the Board of Aldermen last evening an indignant report was received from the Special Committee on the new Charter, and ordered printed. A communication was also received from Mr. Snow, the City Chamberlain, in answer to a resolution demanding to know why warrants drawn on the treasury had not been paid, together with the amount of overdraft, &c.

In the Supreme Court, yesterday, the case of Fernando Wood vs. James W. Nye and others, was commenced on an order to show cause why the temporary injunction granted against the defendants restraining them from acting as Police Commissioners under the new Metropolitan Police bill, should not be dissolved. Ex-Judge Emmons opened for the Mayor, and claimed that the law was unconstitutional. Mr. Evarts, for the defendants, claimed that it was not, and attempted to show that His Honor the Mayor had no power to bring the suit, and no standing in Court. Neither party has finished his plea, and the case was adjourned until to-day at 4 o'clock.

The case of Coroner Connery, charged with having conducted himself improperly during the Burdell inquest, was continued yesterday before Judge Daly. Two witnesses were examined. Mr. Davies, for the prosecution, described the personal examination of Mrs. Cunningham by Dr. Woodward, with womanly minuteness. Her testimony was not as favorable to the Doctor's delicacy as the account given by himself a few days ago. Mr. Hennessey was examined for the respondent, with reference to the expressions used by the Coroner to Mary Dorohue. He testified, in substance, that in Ireland, and among Irishmen here, who knew the story about Teddy Brady's cow, that the remark would be considered as complimentary to the honesty and integrity of any lady concerning whom it might be used. The examination will be resumed on Monday next.

The case of Cross vs. Law, in the United States Circuit Court, was submitted to the Jury yesterday with directions to bring in a sealed verdict to-morrow morning.

In the United States District Court the case of the United States vs. Jeremiah Towle, was put over till to-day, in consequence of the military in Chambers-street making so much noise that counsel could not be heard.

Yesterday in the Court of General Sessions, the trial of Dr. Elijah Hunt, for procuring an abortion on Mrs. Lawson, thereby causing her death, was concluded. The jury found him guilty of manslaughter in the second degree. The charge against Peter Dawson for keeping a disorderly house in the Fourth Ward, was called up for trial. Peters was out on bail, and not appearing to answer the charge, his recognizances were declared forfeited.

The long-talked of parade of Target Companies, which was to have taken place on Monday last, but which the unpropitious weather prevented, took place yesterday. It was not altogether what our citizens had been led to expect, and some disappointment was expressed in consequence. Still it was a very respectable display, and would have been even imposing, if there had been no boilers, who by forming themselves into an independent parade, lessened by so much the effect which harmony in the ranks would have produced. As it was there was a broken chain, stretching down Broadway for an hour or two, whose links would not unite.

The anniversary of St. George's Day was observed with the usual honors, and a dinner, yesterday evening, at Delmonico's. The principal feature of the occasion was the presence of Lord Napier, the newly accredited British Minister, who made a speech, expressive of the most fraternal feelings between this country and Great Britain.

James Connery, while serving as a juror in the Circuit Court, yesterday, obtained leave to go out and get a shilling's worth on the half shell. Before returning to his duties he thought he would try a penny shot at the stand of the pop-gun man. Just as he was about to pull the trigger, he felt a finger in the vicinity of his valuable watch. He suffered the thief to get a short distance from him, when he put down the pop-gun and "put" after the man who had his watch. Catching him he gave him in charge to officer Gillphlan. The arrested man gave his name as Joseph Lee.

A gentleman from Pennsylvania, while halting a few moments during a stroll in the rear of the City Hall on Wednesday night, was embraced by a gentleman and lady, who were also strolling there, and by them relieved of $2,600. He has not yet recovered his money.

The New-York East Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which has been in session at the Fleet-street Church, Brooklyn, for a week past, closed its proceedings yesterday and adjourned sine die. The Slavery resolutions, which caused such a warm discussion Thursday, were not called up again, and consequently no vote was taken.

The Press Again.

We do not see any reasonable pretext for postponing the millennium any longer. The signs of the times seem propitious for its immediate advent. The Independent joins the Tribune in extending fraternal sympathy to the Herald in its sufferings under what those journals are pleased to style the personal invective of the Times. When papers which enjoy the distinction universally conceded to those two journals, begin to deprecate personalities, and insist upon courtesy and personal civility in newspaper discussions, the golden age must be close at hand. When the lion and the lamb lie down together, and both evince such an affectionate solicitude to protect the "hole of the asp" and the "cockatrice's den" from unseemly and inconvenient molestation, there is certainly reason to look for the millennial dawn. Redeunt Saturnia regna.

The symptoms, we must confess, would be a little more pronounced, to use a technical term, if this singular development of brotherly love were a little less spasmodic in its character, and accompanied somewhat more largely by the cardinal virtues of justice and fair play. When the Times, some months ago, remonstrated against the personal invective which was the only reply with which sundry journals met its views and arguments upon topics of public interest, the Independent saw no occasion for commending these sentiments to public favor. On the contrary, it resorted to what savored very essentially of personality by presenting the Editor of the Times as having disgraced the cause of journalism by charging members of Congress with corruption;—and when the results of the Investigating Committee had established the truth of those charges, even to the Independent's satisfaction, that high-toned journal could find no word of acknowledgment for the injustice it had done us. Indeed, even now,—in this very article commending civility and courtesy, it takes occasion to repeat the sneer at the "moral conviction" which led the Times to make the charge referred to, and which the Committee had no difficulty in fully vindicating by the conviction of individual members.

But the Independent is guilty of a much grosser wrong than this. It says that the Times and Herald have had a "fierce war of words about the financial operations of their respective Editors." It was quite superfluous for the Independent, after such a statement, to add that it "knows nothing of the merits of the quarrel." But the best way, when you know nothing, is to say nothing. The Times, as its readers know, has waged no such warfare as the one described. The Herald saw fit some time since to make a vehement attack upon the private business of one of the proprietors of the Times; it did all in its power to break down the title to certain real estate which he had bought and paid for,—to prevent the Common Council from perfecting the contract made for it,—to deter the Government from purchasing it as the site for a Post-office, and generally to involve him in as much pecuniary difficulty as possible. During all this time,—when the Herald was assailing with the utmost malignity and venom the private business and the personal character of this gentleman, neither the Tribune nor the Independent felt called upon to express the slightest discontent with this abuse of journalism. Their sensibilities were torpid, until the Times, in reply to this crusade, took occasion to copy from the Herald's own files column after column of puffs of fancy stock, which proved conclusively that the Money Article of the Herald was used systematically and constantly by the most desperate and unprincipled stock-gamblers in the country as the instrument and tool of their transactions; that instead of being an independent and reliable record of facts,—for the guidance and information of the public, it was nothing but the weapon by which the Fancy Stock Swindlers push their worthless schemes upon public favor, and rob their dupes of their money. We did not assert this—we demonstrated it. Then the Tribune and the Independent were suddenly aroused to the shocking character of these personalities! Then they discovered all at once how very improper and unseemly it was for editors to engage in such a "war of words," and became profuse in their recommendations of charity and the most polished courtesy in the intercourse of the press!

Now we desire the Independent to do us justice before it overwhelms us with advice. We should like to know from that journal, which devotes a good deal of its space to exposing and regulating the financial dishonesties of the day, whether it really thinks our exposure of the real character of the Herald's money articles injurious to the public;—whether that exposure has not been perfectly legitimate and in the line of a journalist's duty; and whether it would have advised us to suppress it, lest we should trespass upon the dignity, or lead the community to distrust the courtesy of the Press. When it will answer these queries, after informing itself of the merits of the "financial quarrel," then we will listen with all patience and docility to its advice.

It is only just to say that the principal object of the Independent's interference in this matter seems to have been a desire to puff itself, and to recommend the "impersonal" style of editing a newspaper, which it has copied from the English press. It counsels an imitation of its example in this respect, and especially advises the Times to "withdraw the name" of a particular person as its Editor,—and then, it thinks, "these offensive personalities will cease." The Independent seems to suppose that somebody's name is presented in the Times as its Editor. This is only another instance of the liability of that journal to write in utter ignorance of facts. The Times has never had anybody's name presented in its columns as its Editor. It has an Editor, who endeavors to prevent half-a-dozen articles appearing in its columns at the same time, each clashing with every other,—and judging from past experience the Independent might profitably imitate its example in this particular. But its course for years in regard to its Editorial department, has been, and still is, precisely that which is now so earnestly urged upon its adoption.

Public Opinion.

The London Times, in an article on the Clarendon and Dallas Treaty, recently said:

"It is singular that while in England public opinion becomes stronger every day, and no set of politicians dare even to be suspected of postponing the national good to their own, yet in America, a Democratic Republic, the professional politicians have things entirely their own way, and enjoy a latitude of factiousness unknown in these islands. Whether it be that politics are falling into the hands of a lower class, or whether the extent of the country and the diversity of interests and character between the several States be the cause of the phenomenon, certain it is that an enlightened public opinion, all-powerful in the direction of national affairs, seems hardly to exist across the Atlantic."

There is, unquestionably, too much truth in what our English cotemporary says of public opinion in this Country. That there is hardly such an element as public opinion manifested in the direction of our national affairs is very easily accounted for. We are not a homogeneous people, politically speaking; the affairs of the nation are directed, not by the representatives of the people, but by the representatives of a party, and our parties are becoming, unhappily, every day, more and more sectional. It is the public opinion of the South, or of the North, that influences the direction of our national affairs, and not the opinion of the people. Though our Government is a Republic, yet it is composed of the representatives of two separate people whose opinions are always in direct opposition. The present administration is the representative of the Southern slave-holding States, and the whole policy of the Government is made to conform to Southern interests. If Colonel Fremont had been elected President instead of Mr. Buchanan, the case would have been reversed; the opinion of the North would have been the controlling element in his administration; but still the direction of affairs, so far as our intercourse with foreign governments is concerned, would not differ much, whether the North or the South were in the ascendency at Washington. It is in our domestic affairs that we need the influence of a powerful public opinion most; and where we feel the want of it most seriously, is precisely where it ought to be the most powerful.

In municipal matters we are not distracted by any sectional prejudices, traditions or policy; here we are a united people, having all the same objects in view, with very trifling differences of opinion as to the best means of obtaining them, and no constitutional laws to prevent the execution of whatever plans may be devised to secure the public good. In this City public sentiment is homogeneous, and public opinion ought to be all-powerful in influencing the action of the public servants. But it has no weight with them whatever. The men who are elected to look after the public interests are perfectly reckless of the wishes or opinions of their constituents. No attention whatever is paid to the desires of the people, and the Jack in office looks to nothing but his own personal profit and convenience. The people groan under the impositions of the city authorities; there has been a continued shriek of indignation arising from all classes, parties, and conditions of people during the past five years, against the wretched condition of the streets; yet the functionaries—whose business it is to attend to such matters; who have money, means and opportunities afforded to them to comply with the public demands—are as deaf to the loudly-expressed opinion of the people as the wooden Justice on the balcony of the City Hall.

We are not willing to confess that the indifference to public opinion, on the part of the administrators of public affairs, is the legitimate result of Democratic institutions; on the contrary, we believe that it is the inevitable consequence of a free representative system like ours, to give to public opinion greater influence than in any other form of government. But, for the present, we cannot deny that the practical working of our system, in this City at least, is not favorable to such a conclusion. But we are as yet in a transition state, and while we are perfecting the machinery of government some inconveniences and anomalies are unavoidable.

The New City Hall and Post-Office.

The bill creating a Board of Commissioners to superintend the erection of a new City Hall in the Park, which will be found in another part of our paper this morning, is more comprehensive in the powers it confers than we had supposed from the reports which have heretofore been published respecting it. The bill authorizes the City to borrow two millions of dollars for the purpose of erecting the building, and gives full power to the Commissioners named in the bill to select the designs, plans, to employ architects, and choose the materials of which the Hall shall be constructed; the only restriction imposed upon them is that they shall place the building "in the rear of the present City Hall bounded by Broadway, Chambers and Centre streets," and that before deciding upon a plan they "shall offer to the proper authorities of the United States Government," to conform any portion of the new City Hall for the purposes of a Post-Office, and the accommodation of the United States Courts, that the Government may require. The City is also authorized to sell to the United States any part of the Park that it may choose to purchase, for the purpose of erecting a Post-Office and United States Court-rooms. We can hardly doubt the readiness of the Government to avail itself of this offer.

As to the propriety, and, in fact, the necessity, of grouping all our great law Courts together in the same building, there can be no question. Whoever has had to transact any business with the officers of the United States Courts in this City must have experienced the great inconvenience and loss of time necessarily occasioned by running about from Dan to Beersheba in search of their rooms. The District Judge's chambers and the Marshal's office are in an old house down in College-place among the dry goods jobbers; the office of the District-Attorney is over a grocery in Beekman-street; and the United States Court-room is in the brown building in the Park, on Chambers-street. It will be a very great convenience to business men when all these offices, as well as all the offices of our City Government, and the various law Courts are all centred in one spot.

The Commissioners named in the bill are all gentlemen of respectability, who will doubtless discharge their duties in a conscientious manner; but a great responsibility rests upon them, for it is not merely the duty of economically expending two millions of dollars that they are charged with, but the selecting of the best design for a great civic monument which is to be the boast or the contempt of the people of this Metropolis for many generations to come. Of course there will be no undue haste in making such a selection, and the freest competition will be allowed to our architects in offering their designs.

The President of the United States is authorized by a law of the last Congress to purchase a site for a new City Post-Office at a cost not to exceed $500,000;—and by this bill the City Government has full authority to sell any part of the Park which the Government may desire to purchase for that purpose. It is scarcely possible that the Post-Office should be in the same building with the Law Courts—as the extensive and peculiar character of its business requires a large building devoted exclusively to its convenience. We trust the President will cause the lower angle of the Park to be carefully examined by practical and discreet men, with reference to its fitness as a site for the new Post-Office. We are confident that it will be found by far the best location on the Island. We have no doubt that it might be purchased for the sum which the President is authorized to pay.

Collisions at Sea—The Case of the "Lyonnais" before a French Tribunal.

We find in the French journals received by the last steamer, reports of a judicial investigation into the collision that occurred off our coast in November last, between the French steamship Lyonnais and the American bark Adriatic, which throws new light upon the causes of that dreadful disaster, and which, we are glad to see, exonerates Captain Durham of the Adriatic from the charges of recklessness and inhumanity that, at the time, were generally proffered by the American and English Press. The magnitude of this disaster, which is yet fresh in the public memory, the great number of lives lost by it, and the important questions involved in it, entitled it to an investigation before a judicial tribunal; an investigation which, probably, would never have been instituted in this country, where the public sensibility has been so thoroughly blunted by the frequency of shipwrecks and disasters, that even the wail from the steamship Arctic, as, with her precious freight, she reeled down into the depths of the ocean, could arouse it only for the passing moment.

For the investigation into the causes of the Lyonnais disaster, by the Tribunal of Commerce at Marseilles, we are indebted to the owners of that steamer, who, believing that the disaster was to be attributed entirely to the Adriatic, caught Capt. Durham at the French port of La Ciotat, where he had arrived with a cargo from Savannah, and made a claim of damages for the loss of their vessels. Captain Durham denied the claim and submitted it to the legal tribunal. The testimony taken before the tribunal gives the only correct history of the disaster, and materially differs from the statement made by Luguiere, the second officer of the Lyonnais, who escaped and landed at this port shortly after the event. It not only exonerates the American ship, but shows that the disaster was caused entirely by the reckless management of the steamer that was lost.

The collision between these vessels occurred on the 2d of November, 1856, about 11 o'clock of a hazy and starlit night, and at about seventy miles from New-York. The wind was southwest. The Adriatic was standing northwest by west, under double-reefed topsails, the topgallant sails furled, and showing no light. Capt. Durham and the watch were on deck. As soon as Capt. Durham saw the lights of the Lyonnais, which was about twenty minutes before the collision, he swung a lantern in his mizzen rigging, some fifteen feet above the deck, and kept on his course, having the right of way, steering close by the wind until the moment when the collision became imminent. The Lyonnais, when Capt. Durham caught sight of her, was steering east northeast, with all steam on, all sail set, and a full wind on the starboard tack. Capt. Devaux and his Second Officer Luguiere, were on deck, and two men were in the bow. The steamer did not see the Adriatic, and did not alter her course until a few moments before the collision; when she put her helm hard-a-starboard, blew her steam-whistle and, bonting to port, stood on to cross the bows of the Adriatic without slacking speed! At the same moment, Capt. Durham, perceiving that the steamer was altering her course and trying to cross his bow, put his helm hard-a-starboard, thus bringing his vessel up into the wind and checking her headway. It was during these manœuvres that the two ships came in contact—the bows of the Adriatic striking the Lyonnais heavily amidships. The Court, after a minute review of the testimony, decided that Capt. Durham was not to blame, and that the collision must be considered merely as an accidental occurrence, so far as he was concerned.

In regard to the complaint that the Adriatic left the place of disaster without offering any aid to the distressed steamer, it was proved that from the moment of the collision, the steamer continued her course at full speed, which led Capt. Durham, who had hove-to to repair his own damages, to suppose that the steamer had not suffered any serious injury. Indeed, the Captain of the steamer did not think that his own ship had been injured until some time after, when the water, pouring in at the fracture, revealed his dangerous situation. Then the Adriatic was so far astern and to windward, that the steamer's signals of distress could neither be seen or heard on board of her. The charge of inhumanity, as well as of culpable recklessness in navigation, may therefore be justly preferred against the French Captain, who was not only swift to run down the American bark, but appeared to be eager to get as far from her as possible after he had been in collision. Capt. Durham has suffered the odium of these charges until this investigation, which, we are gratified to see, has entirely removed them, and laid them upon those who were really responsible for this disaster—the navigators of the Lyonnais.

The facts elicited by this investigation show the necessity of some legislation which shall compel all navigators to sail with more caution. The recklessness with which ships carrying passengers are sailed now-a-days, especially on dark nights and in thick weather, is notorious, and has frequently been commented upon in the Times. Nearly every collision that occurs is, like that under consideration, the natural result of this recklessness. A sailing ship shows no light at sea, because the law does not compel it; and a steamer, relying upon the lights which the law compels it to display, keeps no suitable lookout for the vessel whose unseen and stealthy approach threatens a disastrous collision; a collision which, under the circumstances, becomes an unavoidable accident. The number of these collisions is increasing every year, with the growth of our commerce, and there will be no end to them until a law be enacted and enforced, compelling all sailing ships to display a bright and conspicuous light every night at sea, and all vessels, whether steamers or sailers, to keep a sharp lookout ahead.

Free Wool Benefiting the Farmers.—During the tariff discussions of the last Congress, it was constantly affirmed, by those who opposed the reduction of the duty on imported wool, that free wool would ruin the American wool-grower; and that, should the proposed tariff be enacted, we might expect not only that domestic wool would be sold, this Spring, at prices lower than ever before, but that the competition of foreign wool in our markets would compel our farmers to sacrifice their flocks for the benefit of the woolen manufacturers; who, it was said, were the only parties to be benefited by a free trade in wool. This view of the subject was shown, by the Times, to be not only contrary to the experience of those countries in which foreign wool has long been imported free of duty, but to be unnatural; since an unrestricted trade in the raw material has always tended to increase its consumption by the manufacturer, and thus to create a steady and profitable demand for its production.

We are much gratified to observe that our opinions are now corroborated by facts. Though the new tariff, which admits all foreign wool, costing less than 20 cents per pound, free of duty, does not go into operation until the 1st of July next, our wool market already begins to feel its beneficial effects, and prices are now more steady than they have been for some time past. We noticed in the report of wool sales, a day or two since, 30,000 pounds of fleece at 50 to 60 cents, and 30,000 pounds of pulled at 42 to 47 cents, which are remunerative prices to the farmer, and afford him good encouragement to increase his flocks.

But, notwithstanding these encouraging signs in the market, we observe that the "protection" speculators are continuing their prophetic lamentations over the prospective ruins of the wool-grower. While bartering for the incoming clip of wool, they are busily endeavoring to make our farmers believe that the new Tariff will certainly reduce the price of domestic wool far below the present market rates. We caution our country friends against the plausible representations of these speculators. Their prophecies are not reliable; for there is every reason to believe that the prices of domestic wool will increase, rather than diminish, under the stimulus which the new Tariff will impart to the manufacturing industry of the country. The latest advices from Europe are favorable to high prices for wool. The London auction sales of Colonial wools, which commenced on the 26th of February last, have been firmly sustained at an advance, upon the sales in November last, of 2½d. to 3d. per pound in Australia, and 2d. to 2½d. per pound in Cape wools. As the stock of wool in the principal European markets is unusually light at the present time, a further advance in prices may be expected, which will of course benefit the wool-growers of this country. These facts, however, should not induce our farmers to hold back their wool crops, in the expectation of realizing exorbitant prices. They should only make them cautious about yielding to the persuasions of speculators and granting concessions which are unnecessary. If our farmers will read reliable newspapers attentively, they may always know what their wool is worth; and they will soon ascertain that the Tariff of 1857 is destined to operate as much to their advantage as to the advantage of any other industrial class of our community.

Removal of Steamboat Landings.—There is to be a very important meeting this evening, of the Committee of the Common Council on Wharves and Piers, to discuss the propriety of removing the landings of the Sound and Hudson River steamers up town. The location selected for the Hudson River boats is at the foot of Spring-street, and a location nearly opposite on the other side of the City is required for the Sound boats. The proposed change involves so many important interests, that we do not suppose it will be resolved on rashly. All the steamboat proprietors have been invited to be present at the discussion, but they are not the parties who are most interested in the change. The proprietors of the down-town hotels, the owners of warehouses, and the great commission houses doing business with the East and the West, are more likely to be affected by the change than the owners of the boats. It would greatly facilitate business, beyond a question, if there were two great steamboat landings on both sides of the City; and the commerce of the port has become so extensive as to render the passage of the great steamers through the East River, between Corlaer's Hook and the Battery, really dangerous to the immense fleet of sailing vessels and ferry-boats with which that strait is crowded. The great argument in favor of retaining the present landings is that by being so near together they greatly facilitate the transhipment of merchandise, great quantities of which are merely passed from boat to boat, or carried across the street to the warehouses that have been built near the landings expressly for storage. Much of this merchandise would have to be carted through the streets if the landings were changed, and the crowd and confusion of Broadway and the cross streets greatly increased in consequence. That the proposed change must inevitably be made, sooner or later, cannot be doubted; the only question is whether the present is the proper time for making it.

What is High Life?—One of our exemplary cotemporaries the other day gave a long description, in the style of Jenkins of the Morning Post, of a wedding which recently "came off in High Life." We know what high life means in Europe, where there are privileged classes and constitutional aristocrats, but we must confess our ignorance of what constitutes high life in New-York. The coachman who described a "real lady" as a woman who wore feathers, had his own standard of gentility, and our Jenkinses may have an equally positive way of distinguishing high life from low life. A party that rides to church to be married, with bridesmaids and bouquets, doubtless would be considered "high life," while one that went to the clergyman's, like Miss Permonella Bonnet and John Dean, and were married in the basement, would come under the head of low life. High life is a very equivocal term, and it would be immensely convenient if some standard could be determined upon, by which the public would at once know, when they see an announcement of an occurrence in high life, what sort of life it is that is indicated by that term.

Street Pageants.—We do not object to street shows, nor to street music, nor to anything else that tends to enliven our thoroughfares and make them more cheerful and attractive. But "business before pleasure" in a business community is a safe aphorism for week-day uses. The lower part of the City is devoted exclusively to the purposes of business; there are but few dwelling houses below Canal-street, and the occupants of the over-crowded buildings have no time to bestow upon the passing pageants which ever and anon flank past their doors; and an army with banners and brass trumpets and hostile drums, coming down among the busy denizens of the lower Wards to make an idle parade, let it be ever so brilliant and terrible, is an absolute nuisance. Yesterday, at noon, the great turn-out of the Target Companies marched down Broadway, stopping omnibuses, impeding travel of all kinds, and then filed down through Beekman-street, causing an interruption of the business of the street for nearly an hour in the very busiest part of the day. Drays, wagons, omnibuses, carts, barrows, coaches and pedestrians were all brought to a dead stand-still while the army of target shooters were passing, and all work was suspended by the noise and music. It was a very grand turn-out, we do not doubt, and highly creditable to our citizen soldiery; but the parade might better have taken place in some of the wide streets up town, where it could have been seen to better advantage and been enjoyed by those who had leisure to bestow upon it. It would be a great benefit to the business community of all similar parades were to take place in the avenues, or at least not come below Canal-street.

More Honors to President Pierce's Cabinet.—It must be mortifying to General Pierce to hear of the honors paid to the members of his Cabinet on their return home to their constituents, while he is permitted to slip quietly back to his native hills without the least show of public welcome from his fellow-citizens. Yesterday Caleb Cushing was received by the people of his native town like a victorious general returning to Rome with his trophies. In all the changes of his chameleon political career Caleb has always maintained his personal popularity among his own people. Even when they vote against him they give him unbounded proofs of their respect and affection for him personally, and feel proud of his successes. But General Pierce does not appear to have been so fortunate, and his fellow-citizens resent his not having done more credit to the exalted office which he had the singular fortune to occupy. He is not the favorite son of New-Hampshire it is very clear. We learn from one of our cotemporaries that Mr. Marcy is to be complimented by the merchants of New-York with a service of silver, costing ten thousand dollars. General Pierce's sole compliment has been the six pieces of silver sent to him by the City of Savannah.

Historical Societies.—The Historical Societies in the West are gaining ground, adding new treasures to their collections, and laying out enlarged plans of usefulness. The young State of Wisconsin, never backward in favoring the development of Wisconsin products, whether agricultural or literary, makes an annual appropriation in aid of her Historical Society. The Secretary of that body is a hard-working gentleman, who drives through the world in a hurry, labors much and collects assiduously, adoring autographs, hoarding relics, and traveling hundreds of miles up into the wilds of the State to get narratives of old battles from ancient Indians. By this gentleman's aid, and the State's assistance, the Wisconsin Society, which was nothing three years ago, is picking up a valuable library and choice collections. The Tennessee Society is asking like aid from the State, and seems to need it, its means being sadly crippled. That State is behind-hand in the matter of preserving her early records. The New-York Society will presently occupy their new building, and with their wide-awake Librarian, are doing well.

Boston Newspapers in a Very Bad Way.—Our Boston neighbors have a hard time with their newspapers. The Traveller gorged itself with the Atlas and the Chronicle and Telegraph, and wiped them out of existence, and now the Times dies, absorbed into the Herald. Mr. Gardner Rogers announces the death of the paper in its last number, issued yesterday, and gives public notice of its sale to the Herald, good-will, types and all. The Times was started in February, 1836, and was, consequently, twenty-one years old. The only dailies now left in Boston are the Traveller, Journal, Courier, Advertiser, Post, Transcript and Herald,—seven, in place of the ten which flourished when the year began.

Personal.

At a ball recently given at the Hotel de Ville, Paris, a group, among which was the Secretary of Frank Ewan, were discussing the merits of the Euphrates Valley Railroad. "Your country," said a lady to the Secretary, "will then be very near to us." "Yes, if the project should be accomplished." "Do you doubt its accomplishment?" "The difficulties of execution are very great and numerous." "Certainly, but the English engineers will surmount them." "Oh!" replied the young Persian with an air of cunning, "there is one against which their science must fail; all these deserts are peopled with ostriches." "Well?" "Well, these birds, you know, digest iron; they will eat the road up!" General exclamation, in which the Persian was declared a spiritual forcour!

Miss Alice Mann, a Chicago lady, and a candidate for histrionic honors, is creating a sensation in Mobile. At her benefit in that city, a fortnight ago, the stockholders of the theatre presented her a diamond ring, valued at $300, and the audience exerted itself to carpet the stage with flowers. The lady is a niece to Harry Placide.

Rev. Miss Antoinette Brown, Woman's Rights advocate and reformer, engaged to become a preacher, but after a few months trial, gives it up. Her church at South Butler, N. Y., has been dissolved, and the house closed.

M. Gaillardet, since his return to Paris from New-York, is giving to La Presse, a series of carefully written articles on Mr. Buchanan, and the executive power in the United States.

The venerable Father O'Neil, of Savannah, has met with a serious accident by being thrown from a carriage.

Emile de Girardin, it is said, contemplates buying the monthly periodical, La Revue des Deux Mondes. The price is $60,000 francs.

The minds of Friends are disturbed by a vigorous dispute now going on between the Willmites and Gurneyites—two branches of the Orthodox sections.

Amusements.

Italian Opera.—The third performance of the "Traviata," on Wednesday evening, attracted a slim attendance—perhaps largely owing to the two previous performances, but still quite bad. We are certain, however, that those who were present will influence others by their favorable report. The performance was in some respects the finest we have ever witnessed. Madame Gazzaniga proved herself unquestionably a great artist—fully in vocalization, but surpassingly great in declamatory inspiration. She gives to music what it too often lacks—pure womanly pathos and tenderness. As an actress, she is better than Grisi. With these characteristics, also, and a charming personal appearance, she is destined, we are sure, to create a profound impression on our musical public, if, indeed, we have not, which seems doubtful. At one time we fancied that the faithful of the Academy of Music were sincerely attached to art and disposed to support it. But we recognize but few of the old faces at Niblo's Garden. It is certain, therefore, that their affection was for the building, or (what is possible in this wicked world) their free admissions to the same. The Academy of Music, by the way, is being endued in a beautiful robe of white, to be in readiness like the wise virgins for the coming bridegroom—the gay and gallant Ullmann. The painters are making it look very beautiful.

To night Mme. Gazzaniga appears in "Il Trovatore." Let us hope that there will be a creditable audience.

Wallack's Theatre.—The most perfect comedy performance of the day—the "Rivals," at this theatre—will be repeated to-night. We direct attention to the fact, assured that those who go to witness the play will thank us for so doing.

Niblo's Garden.—A very large class of juveniles will be delighted to hear that the famous Ravels have consented to give four Saturday-afternoon performances at this popular place of amusement, commencing a week from Saturday next. They are wanted and will succeed.

New Music.—Messrs. Wm. Hall & Co. have favored us with copies of

1. Grand fantasia from "I Lombardi," by Verdi, for two performers, by W. V. Wallace.
2. Grand fantasia brilliant, on themes from Verdi's "Traviata," by the same composer.

The duet is a transcription from Vieuxtemps's celebrated solo, with orchestral accompaniments. It is arranged in a thoroughly musician-like way, and will improve the taste as well as instruct the fingers of the performers. The two principal melodies, especially popular at the present time, are two of the best Verdi ever wrote. Suitable for moderate players.

The fantasia from the "Traviata," is by far the most effective yet made. Mr. Wallace has a happy faculty of introducing the best piano effects in the simplest way, the result of a thorough knowledge of the natural position of the hands. In the present instance he has produced a work of great merit, needing only careful study to become a brilliant solo for the drawing-room. Suitable for advanced players.

Where the Anniversaries will be Held.

As the Broadway Tabernacle will not live to see another "Anniversary week," the religious and other societies that usually have enjoyed its accommodations in May are busy looking up other quarters. The Presbyterian (O. S.) Missionary Society and the Sunday School Society will have their meetings in the Broome-street Presbyterian Church. The Home Missionary Society sermon will be preached in Dr. Adams' (Madison-avenue) Church. The American and Foreign Christian Union sermon, and the Seamen's Friends' Society's Anniversary will enjoy the Fourteenth-street Presbyterian Church—Dr. Asa D. Sharp's.

The Female Guardian Society will have (Dr. Giffert's) Calvary Baptist Church. The Colored Girls' Institute Association, the Congregational Union, the Home Missionary, the Bible Society, and the A. B. C. F. M., will have the use of Dr. Cheever's Church on Union-square. The Anti-Slavery meetings and the Congregational Collation will be attended in the City Assembly-rooms.

Closing of the Carlton House.

The guests of this hotel have been notified that the establishment will close on Monday next, when the building will be consigned to chaos preliminary to the erection of a new warehouse on its site. The Carlton has been occupied as a hotel for more than 19 years. It was first opened in 1838 by Mr. Milhous, who kept it only a few months, when it passed into the hands of Messrs. Hogans & Benson, the former of whom is its present host. Mr. Benson, who was formerly a steamboat captain on the North River, died about ten years ago, and Mr. Hogans has conducted it since. Charles Dickens "put up" at the Carlton House, it will be remembered, during his visit to this country, and from it strayed as far down as the Five Points.

☞ Mercer-street Presbyterian (N. S.) Church contributed last Sabbath $5,600 to the American Board of Foreign Missions with the promise of more to come.

What Pictures Fetch.

On Thursday, Messrs. Leeds & Co. sold the second portion of a collection of good pictures formerly belonging to Mr. Brasseaux. The catalogue comprised about 150 pictures, many of which were of undoubted excellence. A "female head," Correggio, sold for $62. The Inn Yard "Wouvermans," $70. Landscape with nuns, "N. Poussin," $60. Pendant to the above, a storm and shipwreck, $70. Cupid casting his arrows, M. A. Caravaggio, $37 50. A head, Rembrandt School, $125. Beatrice and Benedict, Corneille, $180. Vessels in a calm with a distant view of Dort, A. Cuyp, $160. The Madonna, artist unknown, $100. The Shepherd, with Sheep, Goats, &c., Rosa de Tivoli, $67. Composition of rare Birds and Animals, Hondekoeter, $85. Landscape view in England, by Wilson of London, painted in 1754, $55. Annunciation, by Schedoni, $56. The Descent from the Cross, Rembrandt, $60. The Holy Family, by Correggio, from the same collection, $195. Portrait of Bishop Ostenbroek, taken from life, by W. S. Mount, $100. The sale excited a good deal of interest.

Fatal Leap of an Insane Woman.

An inquest was held yesterday by Coroner Gamble, at the Bellevue Hospital, upon the body of Mary Maloney, a native of Ireland, and aged 48 years, who came to her death the previous day from a fracture of the sternum and internal hemorrhage, the result of jumping from a fourth-story window of house No. 588 Second-avenue, on the 19th instant, while labouring under temporary aberration of mind. The deceased was a woman of very intemperate habits. She was married, had one child, but her husband had not lived with her lately on account of her dissipated conduct.

Juvenile Remains.

Health Warden Hovey, in passing through portions of his Ward, at a very early hour yesterday morning, discovered at the corner of Bowery and Delancy-street, the body of a young child. The Warden placed it in charge of the Coroner. Coroner Connery, on examination, pronounced the remains to be that of a still-born male child.

☞ The Presbytery of New-York, which closed its session on Wednesday, met on Monday evening last in the Madison-avenue Church, when a sermon was preached by the moderator, Rev. Joseph Coxe, of Nyack.

Rev. Robert McCartee, D. D., was elected Moderator, and Revs. Messrs. Bonsford and Plumley Clerks for the ensuing six months.

The narrative on the state of religion showed an interesting progress in spiritual things during the past Winter.

The Presbytery licensed Mr. Marinus Willett, a candidate under their charge, as a Minister of the Gospel.

☞ Yellow Fever at Rio.—A correspondent in Rio Janeiro, writing on the 15th of February, reports the weather as very warm, with yellow fever rather prevalent amongst the shipping. The deaths averaged ten a day on board of vessels, but the health of the city was good. Captain Dearborn, of the American bark Fenn, and Captain Hanson, of the bark Westland, had died of the disease. The high export duty on coffee was complained of by the local press. Twenty thousand bags, mostly inferior, remained in first hands for shipment to the United States. Freights were low and scarce.

☞ The Accident in the Baltimore Bay.—The vessel mentioned yesterday as having sunk in a gale, on the 15th inst., in the bay, near the mouth of Sassafras River, was the schooner Eliza Jane McGee, Captain Wilson, with a cargo of 125 tons of Cumberland coal, from Baltimore to Philadelphia. The Captain and crew were saved with nothing but the clothes they had on. They were lashed to the mast-heads until the next morning, when they were taken off and brought to Baltimore by one of Shivers' line of steamers. They have since gone on to Philadelphia to make arrangements to raise the vessel.—Baltimore Sun.

Ticket Swindling—How the Sale of California Tickets is Managed.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I beg to refer to a communication in your issue of this morning, signed "Jonathan Harris" of Pekin, Ill.

I am well pleased at his statement, and your reports of cases of swindling in passage tickets, as I see they have more effect in warning passengers than my two years' advertising has had.

Your "John Chinaman" has a good opinion of his own shrewdness, and, doubtless, thinks that he has been] "peeking" (about our crowded City to good effect, and that he will be the means of saving his fellow-countrymen from cruel frauds. As he and I have the same object in view, I will not quarrel with him; but, as I have somewhat better opportunities to know "how it works," I wish to show him and you that articles written with a partial knowledge of all the facts only serve to throw our country friends into the hands of the sharpers.

It is my endeavor to so conduct the business of my office that intelligent men of business capacity will feel the fullest confidence in the integrity of all their transactions there, and that any apparent error will bear investigation. Dealing as we do with hundreds of ignorant and many dishonest parties, it can hardly be expected that we give universal satisfaction or never make mistakes. Any business man can see how absurd is the supposition that our interest could tempt us to any collusion with outside operators. On the contrary we suffer as much loss and annoyance as our passengers do. It may be well for you to know that the Panama Railroad Company, the U. S. Mail Steamship Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company compose the "mail line" to California. Their united capital is twelve millions of dollars. Their respective Boards of Directors are composed of men of the highest standing in New-York. As the heaviest part of their cash receipts pass through my office, and the fixing of prices is entirely confided there, it is hardly to be supposed they would commit such important matters into the hands of clerks who could be suspected of any shade of dishonesty.

Each Company sends to my office the tickets for its part of the route, signed by its own officers, and numbered in rotation.

No ticket is issued until it is paid for, entered on the books, and the passenger's name inserted on the face of the steamer tickets.

Every day a responsible and authorized person receives the proceeds on behalf of the three Companies, and balances the sales-book wherein the tickets sold are entered in their numerical order.

That any tickets are given to runners in blank, or unless paid for by them, is wholly untrue.

In fact, they seldom buy until they have first sold and got the money and name of the passenger, when they apply for tickets to be issued in that name. We are common carriers, and must sell to any person who demands a ticket and tenders the money, and it is not our business to ask questions as to the private affairs of any applicant, whatever we may suspect. We take every pains to caution passengers, but with our "cautions" and directions to the office in their hands, they seem to prefer giving credence to the bogus men (who promise agreeably to their wishes) rather than believe us.

I estimate that about 150 passengers by every steamer are "taken in," and that one-third to one-half of that number have previously been in my office, and of course know well where it is, and what are the prices. These are the "smart men" who "know what" they are about. Fully convinced that all business in New York is a complicated piece of machinery contrived to entrap and fleece the country folks, they keep a sharp lookout to discover how the steamship company are "playing their game," intending when they do discover the "trick" to profit by it themselves, and leave the "greenhorns" to suffer. The bogus men take much pains to encourage such a state of mind, and if the "papers" who are thought "to know everything," and always speak the truth," will intimate that the public is not safe in the Company's office, they only "play into the hands" of the "outside offices. They take much pains to make the impressions that "they are in our employ," are "Branch offices," or that they buy at wholesale, at cheaper rates;" that the "Head Office must keep up its price, but the "Branch" will divide the profits, &c.

At the dépôts and wharves, runners professing to be in our employ distribute our "cautions" and furnish passengers with much valuable information and advice, so that when they find they have been duped, they are more ready to blame the "rascally company" than their own stupidity, for not following our advertisements. We do not employ any runners or any one outside of my counter, and persons relying on anything but my advertisements must look to themselves. Like other merchants, we claim the right to fix and change our prices as we think our interest and the market will justify. But to prevent disappointment and distress we never advertise them. The case of Mr. Recton referred to, if true, is contrary to our practice, but as in this way we are subject to frequent impositions we try to have positive proof that the case is as represented—and possibly the evidence offered by a stranger was not satisfactory.

Respectfully, J. W. RAYMOND.

Cruel Treatment of Sailors—Arrest of the Officers—Statements of the Seamen.

A case of alleged cruel treatment of sailors, of peculiar interest, came to the knowledge of the United States Marshal yesterday, and soon afterwards the Captain and the first and second mates of the ship Cultivator, were arrested. The third mate escaped. The sailors bear unmistakable marks of abuse.

Patrick McCoy, an Irishman, 21 years of age, made the following statement:

I was first whipped about the 23d of March. I was down in the hold shifting passengers' boxes. There was one box which had been broken, and when I moved it, the lid bounced off. The second mate came down and ordered all the passengers on deck. The passenger that owned this box, said he would not go, but would stay and look to his box. The mate told him there was no fear for his box, and he said one of the sailors had broken it. The mate asked who it was, and he said it was me. Then he took me by the comforter I had on my neck, and hauled me up on deck, and locked me up in a water closet. Then he came in and said, "It was you who broke that box open;" and I says, No, sir, I did'nt break it open. He says "I'll whip you, you son of a b—h." Then he hauled off and struck me three times with his fist in my face; then took out steel knuckles and struck me on back of my head and cut me twice. [There is a sore on McCoy's head, which he says is the effect of these blows.]

He then locked me up in the water-closet and kept me there till half-past five the next morning, as near as I can recollect; it was between ten and twelve in the day time when I was locked up; during that time he did not give me anything to eat or to drink, and nobody came nigh me; my wound bled all over the closet; the next morning about five and half o'clock, the second mate took me out and put me to work on the windlass without anything to eat, and I didn't have anything till between seven and eight o'clock.

About fifteen days after this, I was watch on deck, and about 12 o'clock I came forward to get a drink of water. The men wanted to brace the yards forward, and the third mate came forward and found me in the forecastle; this was between 12 and 2 o'clock at night. As I was coming to the after house he struck me in the face and cut me, because I was forward. He then cut my head again with some sharp instrument, which seemed to be steel.

About a week ago I was painting mastheads, coming in, and the second mate called me down from the loft between 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening. He ordered me to put away my paint pot and brushes. As I was coming forward he stood at the end of the forward house; he hauled out a "crown-cracker" and struck me over the head as I was coming forward. He never told me what it was for, but I suppose it was because he thought I hadn't painted enough. I ran forward on the topgallant forecastle and he followed me; then he hit me again with it and knocked me down senseless; he almost knocked me overboard; I don't know how many times he then struck me; when I could get up I came into the forecastle bleeding.

John Johnson presents a frightful appearance. His hands and head are covered with bruises and sores, and he is so lame and stiff from constant beatings, as he alleges, by the officers, that he can scarcely walk. He gave the following statement: When we were about ten days out, the first mate came along as I was raising the fore-top stanchel, and called me a son of a b—h, and knocked me down with a belaying pin, and gave me a mauling with a belaying pin on deck; another time he knocked me down with a belaying pin, and cut my head; I don't know how many times I have been knocked down and mauled; my coat was almost cut off of me with a dirk.

William Smith, another of the sailors, interrupting, said:—"It was nothing but knock-down and knock-down and maul with that fellow. And none of the men couldn't look at one of them officers without getting knocked down. I have been eight years on the sea, and I never seen such rascality in my life."

William Thomas said:—"Two days before we came in, that is, on Saturday, the first mate ordered John Johnson to be taken forward, to shave his whiskers, and disfigure him. I was ordered to get grease and slush him down till the mate shaved him. I dasn't do any other way, or have it done to me. Then he sent the boy Jim to get a bucket of tar. While I slushed him down with grease, the mate shaved all the whiskers of his left side and part off of his right, but left some on the right. He then ordered me to rub tar on the whiskers that was left, and I took and covered it over with tar. After that I was ordered to bring the carpenter up and serve him in the same way.—I am the only man that was not whipped. Just before we came in, I had a mallet in my hand, and the mate said: 'D——n you, you don't put off without a mark; I'll break your skull with that mallet.' But seven of us got into a boat and escaped, so that I made him lie."

William Gage and William Butler make similar statements of their experience. There are twenty-four sailors in all, and it is said that all of them will testify to abuse similar to that related.

MARINE MATTERS.

The following disclosures, which we are assured upon good authority are correct, exhibits a most astounding case of attempt at fraud upon the Underwriters at Lloyds; a timely exposure of the conspiracy defeated the plot.

ALLEGED COMMERCIAL FRAUD.

From the Colonial (Jamaica) Standard, Jan. 28.

Some time in the Autumn of last year an American vessel of about 300 tons burthen, arrived at Falmouth from the United States, consigned, we believe, to ——, of that port. The ——, it appears, had been originally a Bremen or Hamburg vessel, and under a different name had performed a trip to New-York, where she was surveyed, condemned, and sold as unseaworthy. She was bought, however, at a very small cost; some temporary repairs put upon her; and under the name of ——, dispatched to this island. The character of the vessel was perfectly well known to ——, who found it precisely the sort of craft best adapted to the venture on which they were about to consign it. We shall not trace the operations of the firm during this period of the ship's presence in the port of Falmouth. Suffice it to say, that she cleared out with a cargo, principally logwood, there being, however, according to the Customs' records, some miscellaneous articles of island produce and a few bales of tobacco. The next intelligence received of the ship was that she had been lost somewhere near Bahama, and that the master and crew had arrived safely at New-York. Meanwhile reports had begun to circulate privately that all was not right with the ——. It was said that she was notoriously unseaworthy, and that the Underwriters were to be in some measure defrauded, although no one imagined the actual extent to which the ship was to be made subservient to the fraudulent views of those who had been commercially connected with her in this country. It is said that so great was the distrust in reference to the entire transaction generally felt in Falmouth, that the Underwriters at Lloyds were anonymously cautioned to be watchful of their risk, and to pay nothing in case of reported loss without inquiry.

The firm in Jamaica was composed of Mr. ——, resident at Falmouth, and of Mr. ——, in London; whilst the same individuals constituted a mercantile firm in London under the style of ——. It was at the instance of the latter firm that insurances were effected in London on the —— on her voyage to Europe, with the cargo shipped at Falmouth in this island. The insurances which were thus effected, exclusively of any insurance on the logwood, which formed the great body of the cargo, amounted within a trifle to £10,000.

The actual risks taken at Lloyd's on the cargo amounted to £9,880; but, as if this were insufficient, on the very day that the loss of the vessel and of such cargo as she actually carried became publicly known in London, the London house applied to the Underwriters to extend the risk £1,000; which, for good reasons at that time known to them, they peremptorily refused. Indeed, the suspicions previously entertained with respect to the good faith of the parties were so strongly confirmed by the loss of the vessel, that the Underwriters not only refused to make good the alleged loss, but resolved at once on dispatching a Commissioner to this island for the purpose of inquiring into the facts, and Captain ——, long known as a trader to this and other south-side ports, was selected for the performance of this delicate and important duty. What the results of his inquiries may have been, he have obviously no means of ascertaining. His report, as a matter of course, will be made only to those who commissioned him. From such sources, however, we have been enabled to acquire sufficient information, which enables us at once to designate this transaction as one of the most deeply-laid conspiracy and fraud. For instance, there were insured on the ship as part of her actual cargo 220 casks of ginger. Casks, as a matter of course, constitute an indefinite quantity. They may be hogsheads, tierces, or barrels. The quantity of ginger shipped was 65 barrels. There were 20 casks of arrowroot insured; the actual quantity shipped was one barrel. Insurance was effected on nine casks wax; there were actually shipped 8 cwt. Among the true and genuine cargo there were 84 bales of tobacco, which some time previously had been saved from a wreck and were purchased at a nominal value—it is said, 30s. per bale. The policy, however, comprehended 63 bales of tobacco, which were valued at upwards of £100. Fourteen puncheons, said to contain rum, appear by the Customs-House records to have been shipped by the same vessel, 22 puncheons were insured at a value exceeding £35 per puncheon. We have given a statement of the insurances effected. We cannot do better than supply one of the actual cargo, as it is traced at the Customs and from the wharf books: "65 bales ginger, 1 barrel arrowroot, 8 cwt. beeswax, 84 bales tobacco, and 14 puncheons rum."

Contrasting the two statements, one arrives at the extent of the fraud contemplated. The 250 lbs. of Havana Segars, valued at £1,000; the cutlass-blades, preserved fruits, casks of wine and cases of champagne, bales of wool, packages of returned silks, valued at £2,200: pimento, coffee, turtle-shell and liqueurs, were pure fiction,—nothing of the kind existed. It was not a mere overvalue; it was a fictitious manifest, intended to secure to the Insurer, out of the pockets of the Underwriters, an enormous sum of money without any actual risk.

In a subsequent article, the Colonial Standard withdraws its allegation of the unseaworthiness of the ship, and says, so far from being overinsured, she was not insured to within £400 of her real value, and adds:

"It is stated that the Master received in New-York a sum of £300 sterling for his services in foundering the vessel, and as conclusive evidence of his participation in it, we may state that he wrote from Savanna-la-Mar to the owners in New-York, expressing 'a hope that the vessel was fully insured.' The letter, which was sent by way of St. Thomas, only reached New-York some four or five days after the Captain had arrived there with the news of the vessel's wreck."

The accused parties have fled, it is reported, to Cuba.

The Greek Government had abolished the Quarantine regulations established by the Royal Ordinance of Aug. 12, 1856, together with the fifth article of the Sanitary regulations; by this action on the part of the Greek Government the Greek consular visé of bills of health for vessels coming from any port in the Ottoman Empire is no longer required, but simply a bill of health, or certificate from the Sanitary authorities of the place from which they come. The new regulation is considered as applying not only to vessels coming from any port in the Ottoman Empire, but from any other port.

The schooner Merchant, Stone, for Corsica, Africa, left this port to-day, and after proceeding some six miles outside of Sandy Hook, was overhauled by the steam-tug Satellite, having on board the United States Marshal's Deputies, who seized her as a slaver. She was towed back to the City, and now lies in Buttermilk Channel, under the guns of the United States Revenue Cutter.

Berlin, Maryland, Tuesday, April 21.—The schooner Volant, Captain Moon, came ashore on this beach on the 19th, with an assorted cargo, bound to Norfolk; the vessel is full of water, and cargo all in a damaged state.

From New Mexico.

From the St. Louis Republican.

There was very considerable excitement in Santa Fe, growing out of a collision of the United States troops and a Mexican. A soldier was in the store of a citizen named Gauber, an apothecary, and having some difficulty with him, he advanced on Gauber with an iron cane. G. fired at, and wounded the soldier, who was carried off, and Gauber gave himself up and was taken to jail. The soldier belonged to the Third Infantry, the members of which were much incensed. Capt. Brooks gave strict orders to his men not to leave their quarters, but in the evening, in his absence, they rushed to the jail to kill Gauber. When they effected an entrance they fired, without much reference to their position, some forty shots. One prisoner was killed instantly, two others were wounded, and Gauber received five balls. Gauber died next day, and was buried by the order of Odd Fellows. So soon as the conduct of the soldiers was known, the officers of the Regiment drew them off and ordered them to the barracks. Gauber was a Mexican, and there was much excitement in the town against the soldiers, but it was subsiding. Some of the soldiers had been identified, and would be brought to trial for the offence.

A court-martial was being held in Santa Fe for the trial of charges against Capt. George McLean.

The Democratic Convention nominated Jas. L. Collins, Esq., for Governor, and Ortiz, late Delegate to Congress, for re-election.

No Indians were seen on the plains. The weather was very disagreeable.

The Florida War.—The Spring campaign is now fairly open; if the Seminoles are not subdued before the close, we have falsely estimated their powers of endurance.

Companies or detachments of regular soldiers are exploring the "Indian country." Here and there is discovered a trail, but as yet they have not succeeded in effecting anything of note, save that the Indians are kept on the alert to evade them, and per consequence, are being weakened daily.

On the 10th inst., the volunteer force is to commence a simultaneous movement, each company having a defined section of country to scout, furnished with wagons and supplies for about thirty days. This scout will cover all that section of country between the line of posts established for frontier protection, and Lake Okeechobee—the Istapoga country, the Kissimmee, the coast, &c., &c.

Never, in the history of Florida War No. 2, has so many troops been employed in scouting at one time, and great hope is entertained that the foe will be forced out and captured, or so harassed as to surrender and remove to the West.—Tampa Peninsular, April 4.

The number of the Episcopal clergy in this City has increased one hundred per cent. since 1842. There are now 86 ministers of that faith here.

Ward, the Wife Murderer—Curious Revelations.

We published a few days ago the confession of R. J. H. Ward, convicted at Toledo, Ohio, of the murder of his wife. Those who read the horrid account cannot fail to remember it. The Blade gives the following sequel which have obtained currency in relation to the cold-hearted butcher:

A young man named Hall, who boarded with him, suddenly disappeared, and suspicions are entertained that Ward murdered him. Mrs. Ward became deranged soon after, and it is said that she often made dark and mysterious allusions to the circumstances in her ravings. We also find in the Plymouth papers a statement that a young man, now a resident near Shelby, but then in the employ of Ward as help, says, that some time previous to the murder of Hall, a peddlar stopped at Ward's. He was on foot and carried his packs with him. Early in the evening Ward told the girl to go home as she would not be needed that night. She did so, and on returning next morning, asked where was the peddlar? Ward said he had gone long ago. The girl then started to go up stairs to make the beds, and was told by Mrs. W. that she need not make them; she proceeded up stairs and went into the room the peddlar had occupied, and was alarmed at the sight of blood upon the floor and upon the bed. She quickly descended the stairs, put on her bonnet and shawl, and left the premises. She told the story to her mother, but it was never divulged to any one until since Ward's arrest for the murder of his wife at Sylvania, for fear of incurring the malignity of Ward, who, it seems, was feared and dreaded by all who knew him. The peddlar was never seen afterwards, and it was thought that his body was secreted in a cistern, which was subsequently filled by Ward.

Two Men Hanged by Mobs in Iowa.—On Saturday, the 17th inst., Eli Griffond, a half breed, was hung by a mob in Jackson County, Iowa, for killing John Ingalls. On the same day a mob at Bellevue, Iowa, forcibly entered the jail there, and taking a prisoner, charged him with murder and counterfeiting, and hung him. Great excitement prevails in the vicinity.

It appears that Griffond, when he was forcibly seized by the mob, (who broke into the jail,) declared his innocence, but, when he found that they were determined upon hanging him, and there was no probability of escape, he made a clean breast of it, confessing that he shot Ingalls in the woods, where his body was found. The weapon used was the rifle, and he approached his victim from behind to within fifteen feet, and shot him in the head, the ball passing through and lodging against the skull over the left eye. He further stated that he was instigated to the murder, and paid for doing it by his uncle, a man named Jarrett, and another named David McDonald, neighbors of Ingalls. Griffond also confessed that he had attempted to kill two other persons in the same vicinity—one a man, at whom he shot three times, and the other a woman.

When told the fatal moment was approaching, he acknowledged the justice of his punishment, but said his "uncle ought to suffer also." From 300 to 500 persons witnessed the hanging. A prayer was offered up by a Methodist clergyman, Rev. Mr. Babcock, the guilty wretch kneeling and crossing himself, the surrounding crowd standing in respectful silence. When the last moment arrived, the leader of the party tied a handkerchief over the eyes of Griffond, who remained standing, and twenty four men took hold of the rope together, suspending him in the air, about eight feet from the earth. As soon as the execution was over, two men were dispatched in pursuit of Jarrett, the uncle, and McDonald, his accomplice, and it is said to be the determination to hang them both if taken. Griffond was a native of Missouri.

Arrest of an Important Witness in the Burdell Murder Case for Illegal Voting.—John L. Farrell, the man who swore before the Coroner's jury in New-York at the examination of the Burdell murder case that he sat upon Burdell's stoop adjusting his shoe when a man came to the door and ordered him off, was yesterday arrested in New-York by Officer Kerr for illegal voting in the Eighth Ward last Fall, and this morning brought to this city. Soon after the election he was arrested and held to bail. He was subsequently indicted, but failing to appear, a bench warrant was issued, upon which he was arrested. While on his way up the river he told Officer Kerr that he was advised by a well-known citizen of that Ward to run away. We state this fact simply for the purpose of proving that "all that glitters is not gold;" and that those who pretend to be more honest than others need as much watching as those they speak ill of. This Farrell is an important witness for the people in the Burdell murder case, if his testimony can be relied upon. But we learn from Officer Kerr that the District Attorney of New-York indorsed the bench warrant for his arrest, and made no objection to his being brought to this city.—Albany Journal, Thursday.

Reassessment in Virginia.—The result of the reassessment of the lands of the commonwealth has been ascertained, and is given by the Richmond Enquirer. The assessment of 1850 made the aggregate value of the real estate of Virginia $374,890,226. The assessment of 1856 makes this value $378,654,095, and shows an increase of $96,743,869. The Dispatch says the real value of the lands of the State is nearer $450,000,000 than $375,000,000.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 31, 1857.

OFFICE OF THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, NEW-YORK, April 3, 1857.—Notice is hereby given, that the Directors of the ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY have resolved to increase the Capital Stock of the Company, from One Hundred and Seventy-Thousand Shares, to Two Hundred and Fifty-five Thousand Shares, which new shares will be allotted to the holders of the present stock, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next, and to such persons as may become stockholders by the conversion of Optional Rights, which expire on the 1st day of January, 1858. In the proportion of one share of new stock, to two shares of the old stock.

The Transfer Books will be closed on the 20th day of June next, and reopen on the 1st day of July next.

The holders of the present Stock are required to receive one-third the number of shares to which they may be entitled on the 1st day of July, 1857, and to pay an instalment of $20 per share, on the same day. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds will be issued, and half convertible into the stock of the Company, on or before the 1st day of February, 1858, and the remainder on or before the 1st day of July, 1858; such instalments as may then have been called in, on the present Stock to be paid to the Company at the time of conversion.

Those persons who shall become stockholders by the conversion of the present Optional Rights into stock, on or before the second Tuesday in January, 1858, of the Directors of the Buffalo and Mississippi Railroad, will not be entitled to receive their own rights, having reference to the quantities of stock held by such parties in the two first named companies.

J. W. BROOKS, Director.

NOTE.—As it is important that early action should be taken in regard to the work upon the road, the Directors reserve the right to close the period within which subscriptions shall be received from the stockholders of the two Companies named at any time after ten days.

OFFICE OF THE FORT WAYNE & CHICAGO RAILROAD CO., FORT WAYNE, Saturday, March 30.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THIS Company are prepared to exchange their new Stock, in exchange for that of the Ohio and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Companies, upon the terms, and in the manner, prescribed in the Articles of Consolidation, viz.:

Ohio and Pennsylvania, Interest to July 1, 1856, and 20 per cent premium.

Ohio and Indiana, Interest to July 1, 1856, at par.

Fort Wayne and Chicago, Interest to July 1, 1856, and 6 per cent premium.

Stockholders in either of the old Companies, who may have assigned any portion of their stock, previous, or subsequent, to the consolidation, (Aug. 1, 1856,) without having had such stock transferred on the books of the old Companies and parties holding the certificates for such stock, are notified that this Company will not recognize the transfer of such assigned Stock, as the full shares of the Interest to July 1, 1856, and premium, have been credited to the original holders. Scrip certificates will be issued to such original holders, in cases where fractional amounts of interest and premiums on the old stock exist.

DIVIDENDS

NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY.—DIVIDEND NOTICE.—The Sinking Fund for the redemption of the Bonds of this Company having reached the amount of more than one million of dollars, and the requisite legislative authority having been received, the Directors have declared a dividend of ten per cent. on the capital stock of the Company, payable in stock on the 20th day of April inst., at the Transfer office, No. 45 Wall-st., in pursuance of the following resolution of the Board, adopted on the establishment of the Sinking Fund.

Resolved, That as often as the Bonds purchased by the Sinking Fund amount to ten per cent. on the capital stock, this Company will, upon receiving due authority from the Legislature of the State, declare at the next semi-annual dividend day a stock dividend of ten per cent.

Where the dividend amounts to one or more shares, the same will be placed to the credit of the stockholder, and a certificate for the same issued on application at the office; and when the dividend does not amount to a full share the stockholder will receive a scrip certificate in favor of the bearer, which can be converted into full stock on presentation with other similar certificates, in amounts which can be made into full shares.

The transfer books will be closed at 3 o'clock on the 15th inst., and be opened on the 27th inst.

The Board of Directors have resolved that in future the stock dividends will be declared as often as the Sinking Fund amounts to five per cent. on the capital stock, instead of ten per cent., as provided in the original resolution.

By order of the Board of Directors.

SANDS' SARSAPARILLA.

For purifying the blood!!! The original and genuine article, purely vegetable, every where celebrated for the efficacy in the cure of diseases arising from an impure state of the blood or habit of the system. As an alterative, mild aperient, and renovating agent, it is unequaled. The happy results it produces arise from its containing, in a highly concentrated form, all the medicinal virtues of the best Sarsaparilla. Prepared and sold by

A. B. & D. SANDS, Druggists, No. 100 Fulton-st.

NEW AND IMPORTANT DISCOVERY IN THE SCIENCE OF MEDICINE.—TRIESEMAR.—None are genuine unless the engravings of the Seals of the Patent Office of England, the Seals of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Paris and the Imperial College of Vienna, are fixed upon each wrapper, and around each case.

Sold by Dr. H. A. BARROW, Member of the Imperial College of Vienna, and Royal College of Surgeons, London, who may be personally consulted at his residence, No. 126 Prince-st., (few blocks west of Broadway,) New-York, from 11 o'clock in the morning till 2, and from 5 o'clock till 8 in the evening, (Sundays excepted.)

TRIESEMAR No. 1.—Is the remedy of general and local debility, loss of virile power, premature decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuse, &c.; all physical impediments vanish like magic before it; indifferent, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the marriage state.

TRIESEMAR No. 2.—Entirely eradicates all traces of those disorders which copaiva and cubebs have so long been thought an antidote for, to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the population.

TRIESEMAR No. 3.—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which unfortunately, the English physician treats with mercury to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

TRIESEMAR Nos. 1, 2 and 3, are prepared in the form of a lozenge, devoid of taste or smell, and can be carried in the waistcoat pocket. Sold in tin cases and divided in separate doses, as administered by Velpeau, Lallemand, Roux, Ricord, &c., at Price $5 each, or four cases in one for $20, which saves $8; and in $37 cases, whereby there is a saving of $9.

Special arrangements having been made with the various Expresses, the nine-dollar cases of the Triesemar, and the larger sizes, will be forwarded by Dr. Barrow, carriage paid, immediately on receiving a remittance, to any part of the world, securely packed, and addressed according to the instructions of the orderer, thus securing to the public genuine European preparations, and effectually protecting them from spurious and pernicious imitations

NEW-YORK CITY.

There shall be no [illegible]

Buy a shad to-day, [illegible] Pilots, [illegible] hereafter as nation they will be [illegible] of the State [illegible] passed by the late Legislature, the [illegible] shad-poles are follows:

[illegible] shall be lawful, except in cases [illegible] by law, for any person to erect, or drive in the [illegible] water in the harbor of New-York, any [illegible] for the purpose of fishing, where the water is of [illegible] depth than six feet at mean low tide, under the penalty of $5 for each pole erected or driven contrary to the provisions of this section; and it shall be the duty of the said Commissioners to cause the same to be removed."

The Commissioners of Pilots are made, by the same Port Bill, Commissioners of this act; and they, we understand, are going to work at once to put section 30 into operation. Of course, then, the shad-poles in the North River are to come up at once! Hundreds of jolly fishermen will go without a job, hundreds who now stand in the fish-markets, or go blowing tin-horns through the streets, crying "Shad-oh," will be bushed, and we, the people, must turn to porgies, black-fish, flounders, or go abroad for our shad. It seems as if the millennium ought to hurry up, or it will meet an injunction before it sets foot this way, for prices of every thing we buy go up perpetually, and of all we have to sell go down. Our oysters, they say, are to be poisoned by yellow-fever, if Quarantine goes below; our assets already scarcely weigh down their value in the precious metals, and now the shad-poles are to come up. Save our harbor at all events, but may the "Shad-oh," of the fish-peddlers never be lost in the streets.

Post-Office Dispatch.

The Washington Star says that "the last quarter's returns of the New-York City Post-Office, making more than a cart load of papers, reached the Department on the 6th inst., the quarter ending on the 31st ult. The law allows ten days for their receipt here. By the 16th they were duly examined, verified, stated, and the general account based on them was sent back to the Postmaster there. On the 21st inst., his acknowledgment of the correctness of the Department's adjustment reached the Auditor for the Post-Office Department. The gross postages, for delivery and distribution at that office, in that quarter, were $[illegible]."

Police Candidates.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In your paper of to-day my name is mentioned as a candidate for a position under the Board of Police Commissioners. Permit me to say that the statement is not correct. I am not, nor is it my intention to be, a candidate for any office or position.

GUY R. PELTON.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, April 23, 1857.

Police.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: I notice in your paper of yesterday that I am set down as a candidate for Chief Clerk of the new Board of Police Commissioners. Please do me the justice to say that I am not a candidate for that office, having some time ago expressly stated to the Commissioners that I did not wish to be named in connection with any office in their gift. Wishing the new Commissioners an early and successful administration,

I am, Sir, yours, &c., F. J. OTTARSON.

Board of Aldermen.

The Board met yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock—Alderman CLANCY in the Chair.

Several petitions were received and referred of individuals for the remission of taxes and assessments.

REPORT CONCERNING THE NEW CHARTER.

The following report of the Special Committee on the subject of a new charter, was presented and read:

The Special Committee of the Board of Aldermen, appointed by a resolution of the Board of Aldermen to proceed to Albany and lay before the Legislature the draft of an amended charter for the City of New-York, approved by the Common Council, respectfully submits the following report:

The Committee proceeded to the city of Albany in accordance with their instructions, and presented themselves before the Assembly Committee on Cities and Villages, for the purpose of making known the wishes of the City of New-York. Your Committee was then and there informed that said Committee on Cities and Villages had already in their possession an amended charter for the City of New-York, and said Committee received, but took no notice in any way, of the papers presented by your Committee. This gross insult to the people of New-York through their representatives, developed to your Committee the real designs of these men, and they therefore felt it due to themselves that they should hold no more official intercourse with said Committee; nevertheless, the chairman of your Committee sought to obtain from a member of the Committee on Cities and Villages (Mr. Pomeroy,) some information with regard to the source from whence was obtained the draft of an amended charter which was in the hands of said Committee. In answer to a question to that effect, said Pomeroy stated that the bill was handed to him in his seat and he declined to state the source from whence it came, yet this Committee did report a bill thus obtained to the Legislature and recommended that it become a law. If there can be found in the whole history of legislation a more reckless transaction, your Committee are at a loss where to look for it. In a subsequent conversation with the said member of the Committee, (Pomeroy,) and while remonstrating against such high-handed legislation your Committee were informed by said Pomeroy that the matter had been decided upon in a Republican caucus, and that the bill would positively become a law. Said Pomeroy stated, at the same time, that the said Republican Party was a new party, that it had no pretense to the name of Democratic Government, and must take place for its friends!! Thus acknowledging in the most unblushing manner the iniquitous designs of these conspirators against order and good government. This same Pomeroy had the baseness afterwards to deny, upon the floor of the House the words by which he had committed himself and his party. It is not the purpose of the Committee to enter at this time upon a discussion as to the legality of those measures which reckless partisans have attempted to foist upon the people of this City. Their sole design is to lay before this Board a report of their action under the instructions which they received. The proper steps have already been taken to test the constitutionality of these acts, and the Committee rely with confidence upon the result. They know that the people will reject with scorn and indignation this attempt upon their rights by the enactment of laws not asked for by them, but concocted and carried through the Legislature by a few designing men, among them some whose previous attempts at fraud upon the ballot box had met with the infamy they deserved, and who had secured the coöperation of well-known political intriguers at Albany. The sole intent and purpose of those laws is to annul the will of the majority of the citizens of New-York. It remains for the Courts to determine whether they are or are not constitutional, and it remains for the people to determine whether they will or will not submit to them. It would appear strange that representatives from one section of the State, owing their position to the simple will of the majority, should thus defy the expressed will of the majority of another section, were it not for the notorious character of the men by whom they are controlled. It is well known that there exists in this State an organization of men who, for a series of years, have been banded together by bonds of a common infamy for the purpose of obtaining place and power, assuming by turns various names for the purpose of deceiving the people as to the real character of their organization.

They have succeeded in a few instances, in times of political excitement, and under false cries of reform, in obtaining power, for brief periods only, to be hurled indignantly from their places by reaction of feeling when their real motives were discovered. Having at length exhausted every other name which could deceive the people, and finding their party despised in every section of the country, they at length assumed the sacred name of Freedom, and under a mock sympathy for a race which they, of all others, despise as their inferiors, they boldly announced themselves as the sole exponents of Liberty, and by the most unblushing falsehoods, the most incendiary appeals, and a lavish expenditure of money, they boldly attempted, by coöperating with all the elements of disunion and disaffection which existed in various portions of the country, to obtain possession of the general Government; purchasing or stultifying the press of the rural districts, and abandoning the larger cities where their falsehoods and baseness would be exposed, they carried their incendiary harangues to the interior of the State; and not until after the result of the late election was made known, was it conceived how adroitly they had laid their plans. The patriotism of the Union triumphed, they were defeated in their real designs, but they succeeded in returning to the Legislature from the interior counties the most shameless set of political hacks who have ever disgraced the numerous parties to which they had in turn belonged, but which in turn they had traitorously betrayed. A list of their names with the various schemes of public plunder with which they have been connected would be a sufficient history of these men. Their familiarity with legislation had taught them the power of a majority, and they had sought an opportunity to exercise it. Having already exhausted the Treasury of the State and plunged it into an enormous and inextricable indebtedness they turned their vassal eyes towards this devoted City. Here was wealth in abundance from which to fill the pockets of these unscrupulous leaders. Here too was the citadel of a Union-loving Democracy, here the idea of disunion and corruption had been stigmatized. Here their base designs had been exposed, Here their vile falsehoods exposed. Honest Democrats and anything united their foul hands and united in enacting those most infamous laws which we are now called upon to submit to. New offices of every description have been created, with large, extravagant salaries, and filled with shameless partisans intrusted with the disburse[illegible] of public money, the tax payers of the City [illegible] a mercenary force [illegible] to override and overcore [illegible] will. No man can read [illegible] purport. They might [illegible] blood, for they may not [illegible] And we now call upon the people to prepare for the issue!

"We may suffer, but we shall not suffer long;
We may err—but we will not err long."

All of which is respectfully submitted.

PETER MONEGHAN,
MORGAN L. HARRIS.

The report was ordered to be printed.

WHY THE COMPTROLLER'S WARRANTS HAVE NOT BEEN PAID.

The following communication was received from the City Chamberlain, in reply to a resolution calling on him to explain why warrants drawn on the Treasury have not been paid:

CHAMBERLAIN'S OFFICE, SHOE AND LEATHER BANK, NEW-YORK, April 23, 1857.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen of the City of New-York:

GENTS.—In compliance with a resolution of your Board, passed the 20th inst., "requiring the City Chamberlain to report his reasons for refusing to pay the City warrants lately drawn on him, with a general statement of the amount of funds in his possession to the credit of the several City accounts," &c.

I beg to report that the City funds are kept by the Chamberlain under two heads: one the City Treasury account, and the other the account with the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund.

On the 11th of March last the City Treasury had to its credit one million two hundred and ten thousand four hundred dollars; on the 19th of March, the next day, the account was overdrawn two hundred and thirty-six thousand eight hundred dollars. This overdraft continued to increase daily until the 17th of April, when the City Treasury was overdrawn one million one hundred and thirty-two thousand six hundred dollars, ($1,132,600.)

In addition, the Shoe and Leather Bank has taken from the Comptroller, on its own account, revenue bonds for three hundred thousand dollars, ($300,000.) making a total overdraft of the City Treasury account, including bonds held by the bank, $1,432,600.

On the 17th day of April the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund had to their credit eight hundred and eighty-three thousand one hundred dollars, ($883,100.)

Leaving a net overdraft over and above all accounts, City Treasury and Sinking Fund, of five hundred and forty-nine thousand five hundred dollars ($549,500.)

I beg further to state that the total amount of checks that have been refused payment are about two hundred thousand dollars, which amount would have been paid by the Chamberlain, in addition to the overdraft above-mentioned, if he had been assured that that amount would have been the extent of the overdraft, or would have saved the City warrants going to protest.

I would also advise the Board that revenue bonds are now being issued, bearing an interest of seven per cent., which, being a very desirable investment, will, undoubtedly, in a few days, replenish the City Treasury, when all demands will be met.

(Signed) A. V. STOUT, Chamberlain.

Alderman BLUNT moved that the communication be referred to the Committee on Finances.

Alderman MOSPENDER remarked that the banks in which the City deposits were formerly placed always advanced enough to meet all drafts presented; but there never had been so large an over-draft as at present. The fact was, the City credit has suffered much of late, and that is chiefly the reason it is so difficult to raise money at the usual rate of interest. He remembered when all the funds desired could be had from 4½ to 6 per cent.

Alderman BLUNT stated that there was an unusual number of claims pressing upon the Treasury for payment: the new Reservoir, the Central Park and other large expenditures had aided in making the City short. He deprecated the practice of paying contractors for work before the assessments are collected; it was not so formerly.

Alderman TUCKER took exception to the giving out that the City is bankrupt, which report will go forth on the wings of the wind, to the great detriment of its credit. The Treasury is not bankrupt; it has merely suspended payment.

Alderman FULMER alluded to the assessment business, and said that there were revenue bonds issued, in anticipation of assessments, and now lying back, to an amount that, in a few days, when they are made public, will startle the community. He recommended the repeal of the ordinance requiring money to be paid on contracts, before the assessments are collected.

Alderman CLANCY admitted that there was an extraordinary pressure on the City Treasury, on account of the Central Park and other improvements, but he claimed that there was some fault in the matter. He charged that the Comptroller's Department was conducted in a loose and irregular manner. Mr. FLAGG, he said, was recently urged by the Managers of Savings Banks, and others, to put up the interest on Revenue Bonds to 7 per cent., and then refused. Since then he has been compelled to advance the rate to 7.

The communication was referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion the Board then adjourned to Monday at the usual hour.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Thursday. The President J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

After the reading of several petitions a resolution was adopted that the Clerk of the Board be authorized to notify the meetings of the Standing and Special Committees of the Board in the Daily TIMES, HERALD, TRIBUNE, SUN, and Herald. The resolution was adopted without discussion.

A resolution was offered by Councilman OTTARSON, for the revision of the Rules by a Committee to be appointed for that purpose, so as to cause them to be conformable to the new Charter, was laid on the table.

A report of the Committee on Fire Department was accepted; and a resolution to make the Post-office bell, a district bell, was adopted.

THE VALIDITY OF THE POLICE BILL.

Councilman BOOLE moved to take from the table the resolution relative to the validity of the new Police Bill. Delay arose in consequence of the original document not being forthcoming. Councilman BOOLE, for that reason, would have withdrawn the motion, but Councilman HASWELL objected. Some confusion arose in consequence of the impossibility of determining whether the board could proceed. Several members spoke. At last, a copy, certified by the Clerk of the Board of Aldermen, was produced.

The President, in answer to a question, stated that the resolution involved no expenditure, but only the protection of property.

Councilman OTTARSON said, that for the Board to come in at the third hour when an injunction was already issued, was quite unnecessary and highly improper; the Board had the assurance of the Mayor that he would disobey the law. One member of the Police Commission would not go with him. If the majority of the Council choose needlessly to show their teeth, they might do so; but he would advise the measure to be laid on the table.

Councilman WARNER said resistance to law was the very principle of action of those with whom the last speaker uniformly acted. He (the speaker) did not want to resist, but to contest the law, to ascertain its sense in Courts of law.

Councilman OTTARSON said there was great excitement a few years ago among the Democratic party in reference to a certain measure, but the times are changed,—laws are passed by a different party. He would return the same doctrine to his opponents they had so loudly advocated, namely—that they should obey the law until it was constitutionally changed.

On vote—33 affirmative, 14 in the negative—the Board concurred with the action of the Board of Aldermen.

The Board then went into Committee on the regular calendar, and a number of resolutions were passed to a third reading.

Among the matters which came before the Committee was a resolution appropriating $5,000 for the celebration of the Fourth of July.

The report of the Special Committee on organizing the various bureaux under the new charter, was made the special order for the next meeting, directly after the presentation of petitions and resolutions.

The Board, on the rising of the Committee of the Whole, adjourned.

Board of Supervisors.

The Board met yesterday at 4 o'clock, Supervisor CLANCY in the Chair.

The only business transacted was the reception and reference to the Committee on Annual Taxes, of a communication from the Commissioners of Taxes and Assessments, requesting the Board to furnish additional room in connection with their office for the Assessors, who by a late act have been attached to the department of Taxes and Assessments.

The Board adjourned to meet on Monday next at 4 o'clock.

Special Partners.

The following law, which is interesting and important to a very large class of our business community, is among those enacted at the late session of the Legislature:—

AN ACT to amend the revised statutes in relation to limited partnerships.

The People of the State of New-York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Section three, article one, title one, chapter four, part second of the Revised Statutes, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 3. The general partners only shall be authorized to transact business for the partnership, except as provided in section seventeen, and no special partner shall be authorized to sign for the partnership, or to bind the same.

SEC. 2. Section twelve of said article is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 12. Every alteration which shall be made in the names of the partners, in the nature of the business, or in the capital or shares thereof, or in any other matter specified in the original certificate, and the death of any partner, whether general or special, shall be deemed a dissolution of the partnership, and every such partnership, which shall in any manner be carried on after such alteration shall have been made, or such death shall have occurred, shall be deemed a general partnership in respect to all business transacted after such alteration or death, unless renewed as a special partnership, according to the provision of the last section.

SEC. 3. Section seventeen of said article is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 17. A special partner may, from time to time, examine into the state and progress of the partnership concerns, and may advise as to their management; he may also loan money to, and advance and pay money for the partnership, and may take and hold the notes, drafts, acceptances and bonds of, or belonging to the partnership, as security for the repayment of such moneys and interest, and may use and lend his name and credit as security for the partnership, in any business thereof, and shall have the same rights and remedies in these respects as any other creditor might have. He may also negotiate sales, purchases, and other business for the partnership, but no business so negotiated shall be binding upon the partnership until approved by a general partner. Excepting as herein mentioned, he shall not transact any business on account of the partnership, nor be employed for the purpose, as agent, attorney or otherwise. If he shall interfere contrary to these provisions he shall be deemed a general partner.

SEC. 4. Section twenty-three of said article is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 23. In case of the insolvency or bankruptcy of the partnership, no special partner shall, except for claims contracted pursuant to section seventeen, under any circumstances, be allowed to claim as a creditor, until all the claims of all the other creditors of the partnership shall be satisfied.

SEC. 5. This act shall take effect immediately, and shall apply as well to such partnerships existing at the time of the passage thereof, as to those thereafter formed.

The New City Hall Bill.

The following is the Act, passed April 17, authorizing the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York to erect a new City Hall, to raise money to loan, and to appoint Commissioners for that purpose:

The People of the State of New-York represented in Senate and Assembly do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Richard M. Hatchford, Gustavus A. Conover, Robert Emmet, Edwin D. Morgan, Henry Evesson, are hereby appointed Commissioners of the new City Hall in the City of New-York, and all vacancies which may occur among the said Commissioners shall be filled by the Common Council.

SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of the said Commissioners to direct and superintend the erection of a new City Hall in the City of New-York, upon that portion of the Park lying on the rear of the present City Hall, bounded by Broadway, Chambers and Centre streets, or so much thereof as may be found necessary.

SEC. 3. The said Commissioners shall have power to decide upon the plans and specifications, to advertise for and receive proposals, to make contracts and to do all and everything necessary to the building and completion of the same under the provisions of this Act. But before deciding on any plans or specifications it shall be their duty to offer to the proper authorities of the United States Government to conform any portion of the interior plans of said building to the purpose of a Post-office, and the accommodations of the Courts of the United States, and to convey to the United States Government the portions of ground covered by said building so occupied. And the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York are hereby authorized and empowered to make conveyance by deed of grant or lease of any portion of the Park to the Government of the United States, for the erection, at the expense of the said Government, of such building for the purposes of a Post Office, or accommodation for the Courts of the United States, held in said City, and for the officers attached to said Courts, upon being duly compensated for the same; and in case of such conveyance by the City, the jurisdiction of the State of New-York over said ground shall be hereby released to the Government of the United States for such purposes, reserving, however, to the State of New-York concurrent jurisdiction relative to all civic and criminal processes.

SEC. 4. The said Commissioners shall have full power to employ architects, engineers, superintendents, clerks, and such other necessary assistants as may be required for the construction of the said City Hall, the compensation of such architects, engineers, superintendents, clerks and assistants, to be fixed by the Commissioners, by and with the consent of the Common Council. The said Commissioners shall receive as compensation not exceeding five dollars per day, for each day's actual attendance on their duties, to be certified to the Comptroller under oath.

SEC. 5. The provisions of all acts applicable to contracts of the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty requiring appropriations of money to fulfill the same, are hereby declared applicable to the contracts to be made by the said Commissioners so far as the same are not inconsistent with this Act. The contracts entered into by the said Commissioners on behalf of the said Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty shall be filed in the office of the Comptroller within ten days after the same shall be executed.

SEC. 6. The said Commissioners shall keep full minutes of their proceedings, which shall be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Common Council of the City of New-York within ninety days after the said new City Hall shall be fully completed.

SEC. 7. It shall be lawful for the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty to raise by law, from time to time and in such amounts as they may think fit, a sum not exceeding two millions of dollars by the creation of a public stock to be called "New City Hall stock of the City of New-York," which shall be redeemable in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, out of the Sinking Fund of the said City of New-York, and shall bear an interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum.

SEC. 8. It shall be lawful for the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty to determine what shall be the nominal amount or value of each share of the said stock and of what number of shares the same shall consist; and the Commissioners are hereby authorized to sell and dispose of such shares at public auction, and to issue certificates therefor on such terms as they shall think proper, provided that the stock shall not be sold at less than its par value.

SEC. 9. The provisions of the act entitled "an act to regulate the finances of the City of New-York," passed June 8, 1813, which are not repugnant to or incompatible with any provisions in this act contained, shall apply to said stock.

SEC. 10. It shall be lawful for the Supervisors of the City and County of New-York, to order and cause to be raised by tax on all property subject to taxation within said City and County, in addition to the ordinary taxes yearly, and every year a sum of money sufficient to pay the interest annually accruing on said stock.

SEC. 11. The moneys to be raised by virtue of this act shall be applied to the erection and completion of a new City Hall in said City of New-York, and to no other purpose whatsoever.

SEC. 12. The Commissioners appointed under this act shall not be directly or indirectly interested in the plans and specifications for said building, or in any contract for work to be done or materials to be furnished therefor; and said Commissioners, or either of them, for every violation of the provisions of this act, may be removed by the Mayor by and with the approval of the Board of Aldermen.

SEC. 13. This act shall take effect immediately.

Almost Successful.

On Wednesday night last, the Fourth District Police, Brooklyn, picked up a man in the street, named DANIEL CONNOY, stupid from the effects of narcotic poison. It seems that he had been drinking laudanum, undoubtedly with the intention of taking his own life, and was placed in charge of Dr. RICORDS, to be pumped out, which operation saved his life.

Kings County Hospital.

During the past week 38 patients were admitted at this Hospital; 40 were discharged, and six died, viz.: Robert Larkin, aged 27; Sarah O. Sharp, aged 55; Charles Crosier, aged 35; James Moran, aged 47; Wm. Flood, aged 40; Heinrich Wirth, aged 16.

Dismissal.

The Board of Superintendents of the Poor for Kings County, at a meeting held on Wednesday, passed a resolution dismissing Dr. BAZEMAN, Keeper of the Lunatic Asylum, to take effect on the 10th of May. No cause is assigned for the removal.

A dead infant was picked up in Washington Park, Brooklyn, yesterday morning. This is so common an occurrence that but little attention is paid to such subjects now by the authorities.

NEW-JERSEY.

Nominations for the Firemen's Election.

The delegates from the various Fire Companies in Jersey City, met at the house of Empire Hook and Ladder Company No. 1, on Wednesday evening, to nominate candidates for Chief and Assistant Engineers, and for the Fire Commissioners, provided for in the new law, all of whom will be voted for at the election to be held on Tuesday, May 5.

Chief Engineers—Samuel A. French, for reflection, and Jacob Z. Marinus.

Assistant Engineers—Adrian B. Reynolds and Wm. L. Stevens for the First Ward; James Wallace and James McLaughlin for the Second Ward; John Howseth and John B. Haight for the Third Ward; and John Coyle and John G. Haybeck for the Fourth Ward.

Fire Commissioners—D. S. Gregory, Jr., Charles Martindale, Charles Scott, D. W. Stone, Thomas Royle, R. K. Terry, J. Clarke, George Dempsey, Wm. White and H. C. Smith.

The leases of 34 pews for a hundred years each in the new First Reformed Dutch Church, Jersey City, were sold at auction on Monday evening, for $6,547. The highest premium paid was $600, and the lowest $10—the average being nearly $193 per pew. Several pews were rented for a year, at from $1 to $10. The whole sale comprised about one-fourth of the house, and noted $6,644.

New Ferry-boat Launched.

The new ferry-boat for the Jersey City ferry was launched from the yard of DAVIES & BURTIS, at Red Hook Point,
